CAN'T SETTLE GERMAN REPARATION

FEAR COUNCIL MAY DISBAND NEAR FUTURE

LLOYD GEORGE THINKS SETTLEMENT WOULD TAKE SOME TIME; FRENCH WANT IMMEDIATE SETTLEMENT

(By Associated Press).

Paris, Jan. 28.—The advancing of views of the members of the Allied Supreme Council over German reparation caused quite a commotion in the conference here today. In some circles it is regarded that the council is about to be broken up.

Reach Decisive Day

Representatives of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy and Japan, attending the session of the Supreme Allied Council, passed this morning what Premier Briand of France described as the "decisive day" of the meeting. The question of reparation again was brought up, with the view points of France and Great Britain especially.

It was announced by Premier Lloyd George that the reparation question could not be solved at the present meeting, that it would take practically the rest of the week fixing the amount of the German debt and the way it should be paid. Later, he asserted, the allied and German delegates would meet for a final discussion of the settlement.

Briand Not Convinced

M. Doumer, French minister and M. Briand were not convinced by Premier Lloyd George's statement, although Belgium and Italy seemed to agree with the British representative. Briand still adheres to his belief that the reparation question should be settled "once and for all" by next Friday, and that a final or total amount of German reparation should not be fixed, but that the payment should be fixed on the annuity plan.

The highest temperature reached yesterday was thirty-three and the lowest was fifteen degrees above. On the same date last year the temperature ranged from twelve above to twenty-two below zero. The coldest January 27 since 1900 was twenty-four below in 1904, while the warmest was forty-seven above in 1906 The coldest place in the United States yesterday was Northfield, Vermont, where it was twelve degrees below. TO HELP BOOST TOURIST TRADE

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE WILL OFFER COOPERATION TO JANESVILLE IN BRINGING TRAVELERS TO STATE

The Wisconsin Rapids Chamber of Commerce will offer its cooperation to the Janesville Chamber in bringing the tourist trade to Wisconsin and in showing the tourists of other states the attractions the state has, according to Pres. C. A. Normington and Secretary Fritzsinger who are taking up the matter. The movement has been started by L. O. Holman, manager of the Janesville Chamber.

Would Route Thru Dells

The plans which the local business men hope to accomplish is to route the tourists up thru the Dells thru this city and on up to the northern lakes. It is expected that by arousing an active interest the roads between the Dells and this city will get considerably more attention. The Highway Commission has already announced extensive impovements in the highway while more interest would bring about more work on the highway, it is thought.

The plan which Mr. Holman has outlined is described as follows:

"An organization to develop the tourist and resort possibilities of Wisconsin is advocated by L. O. Holman, manager of the Janesville Chamber of Commerce, urging that the state commercial secretaries take action to form such a body. Mr. Holman declares that the state has unusual advantages because of its lakes, historical associations and scenic beauties, which are not being suitably boosted.

State Offers Much

"There is no state that can boost more splendid scenic beauties or resort possibilities than Wisconsin" said Mr. Holman, bringing out that thousands could be induced to spend their summers in this state. He points out that Michigan, Illinois and other surrounding states develop these resources and are as a result taking tourists from Wisconsin who otherwise would come here."

FIRE SCARE AT CONSOLIDATED

TAR CATCHES FIRE STARTING BLAZE — NO ONE KNEW THERE WAS A FIRE — NO DAMAGE DONE

The fire department was called to the Consolidated Water Power & Paper Co. plant about 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon to extinguish a fire which had gained some headway on the roof of the new decker house. The blaze started as a result of flames under some tar which was being heated for roofing compound. It was not known that there was a real blaze started until it reached such proportions that the people in the business district were attracted to the scene.

Could Not Burn

The new decker house roof is of fire proof construction which would make it impossible for the roof to burn however when the blaze got under headway the flames quickly spread over the roofing compound used over the tiling burning it off.

Smoke penetrated all sections of the mill causing the paper mill men to wonder where the source was. It was discovered after investigation that the blaze was on the roof.

Use Much Water

Considerable quantities of water were used in extinguishing the blaze and portions of the mill were flooded however it did not interrupt the paper machines and other parts of the mill from the regular routine.

SPLENDID BARGAINS OFFERED BY LOCAL MERCHANTS; PUT ON SPECIAL DOLLAR DAY OFFERINGS; EXPECT BIG DAY

For the first time in the history of the city the merchants of Wisconsin Rapids, nearly thirty of them, have joined cooperatively offering the buying public special bargains on Dollar Day, which was set by them for Jan. 29th. The cooperative plan of working up a big bargain day for the townspeople and the rural people has been considered for some time and it was through their willingness to make especial inducements that the splendid bargain day was arranged. One of the largest bargain crowds in the history of the city is expected tomorrow.

Decorate Windows

The windows have been arranged and decorated by the local merchants showing the Dollar Day offerings and listing of bargains which will be offered. Each Dollar Day Store has large cards in the window telling that it will offer bargains on Dollar Day. In reviewing the lists of Dollar Day bargains it is safe to say that the offerings are the most attractive that have been made to the public in many a day. The bargains are many of them in club groups, several articles for one dollar. Some stores offer dollar reductions, and some are selling outright much more highly priced articles for one dollar only on Dollar Day. Some are offering dollar down and dollar a month terms on the purchase of articles.

High Class Goods

The bargains are not made up of old goods, shop worn articles and seconds but new goods and are backed by the reputation of the merchants and the Tribune. Both the merchants and the Tribune will vouch for the quality of the goods, maintaining that they are of regular quality and are picked directly from the regular stocks.

The following stores are the ones who have made Dollar Day, Jan. 29th possible: W. G. Henke Grocery, Johnson & Hill Co., The Madison, Model Drug Store, Howard's Variety Store, Nash Hardware Co., Matthews Bros. Music Shop, Millers Store, Steinberg's Style Shop, The Fair Store, Wisconsin Rapids Bakery, Renee Hat Shop, Otto's Pharmacy, Fridstein Inc., Normington Bros., People's Cash & Carry Grocery, A. H. Kleberg Grocery, Reichel's Jewelry Store, Fridstein-Anderson, Smith & Kaltenecker, Kruger & Turbin Co., Staub's Electric Shop, Blommer Ice Cream Co., W. C. TAYLOR HEADS STOVE CONCERN

COMPANY SHOWS PROSPEROUS GROWTH; PLANNING EXPANSION FOR NEXT; OPERATE PLANT TWELVE MONTHS

T. A. Taylor was elected president of the Prentiss-Wabers Stove Co. at their annual meeting, succeeding himself in the office in which he has served for several years. The other officers are:

Vice. Pres.—A. J. Hasbrouck.
Sec.-Treas.—D. B. Philleo.
Directors—E. B. Redford and C. D. Searls.

Report Good Year

The reports of the officers showed that the company has enjoyed one of the most prosperous years since they have been organized and that for the first time in their history they operated for the full twelve months of the year. Pres. Taylor states that thru extensive advertising and effort they have very good connections with the best outing goods jobbers and the outing stove made in this city is reaching every part of the United States as well as foreign countries. The orders for the new spring trade are already coming in to the firm, he says, which indicates an early opening of what is predicted will be the biggest business the company has ever experienced.

May Increase Force

The company has employed steadily the past year about twenty-five men and turned out an average of eighty stoves a day. The number of men may be increased in the near future, the officers say, and the production of stoves may be boosted to more than one hundred a day. There will probably be no change in the present price of the outing stove, the improvements which have been made in it lately taking up all difference in the market price of metals and other materials which they use. The market conditions, however, are considerably relieved over a year ago, Mr. Taylor says, it being comparatively easy to get any material now.

AWARD ANNA BUTTKE $800 HEART BALM

TAKES JURY FIVE AND ONE-HALF HOURS TO DECIDE DAMAGES; DROP CASE OF SEDUCTION STARTED

Mrs. Anna Buttke, of Marshfield, was awarded $800 damages in circuit court here Thursday evening after the jury had deliberated about five and one-half hours. The damages were awarded against August Mews, of the same city, on a charge of breach of promise which the woman made, and in which she asked $2,500. The case went to the jury at about three o'clock Thursday afternoon when Attorneys Williams & Williams of Marshfield had completed their arguments for the plaintiff and Goggins, Brazeau & Goggins had completed their arguments for the defendant.

Answer Two Questions

The jury answered two questions which Judge Park gave to them for consideration, the first being:

"Did the defendant in June, 1917, promise to marry the plaintiff?"

The answer to jury brought in was "Yes."

The second question was:

"If the court should determine that the plaintiff is entitled to judgment at what sum do you assess her damages?"

The answer was, "$800."

Fill Court Room

A large number of spectators who had gathered in the court room to hear the case listened to the final pleas of the lawyers which were taken before the jury Thursday afternoon. Atty. Theo. W. Brazeau and Atty. Hugh W. Goggins both spoke for the defendant while both Attys. P. A. and R. R. Williams spoke before the jury for their client.

Both of the parties in the case told stories which were practically similar in much of the detail. Mrs. Buttke stated that Mews used to come to her home over week ends when he came into town, he being a contractor who often had work out in the country which would keep him out of the city much of the time. She admitted, as he did, that very intimate relations had existed between them, the difference in their stories being that she alleges that he had promised to marry her while he denied that part of it.

FIRE SCARE AT CONSOLIDATED

TAR CATCHES FIRE STARTING BLAZE — NO ONE KNEW THERE WAS A FIRE — NO DAMAGE DONE

The fire department was called to the Consolidated Water Power & Paper Co. plant about 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon to extinguish a fire which had gained some headway on the roof of the new decker house. The blaze started as a result of flames under some tar which was being heated for roofing compound. It was not known that there was a real blaze started until it reached such proportions that the people in the business district were attracted to the scene.

Could Not Burn

The new decker house roof is of fire proof construction which would make it impossible for the roof to burn however when the blaze got under headway the flames quickly spread over the roofing compound used over the tiling burning it off.

Smoke penetrated all sections of the mill causing the paper mill men to wonder where the source was. It was discovered after investigation that the blaze was on the roof.

Use Much Water

Considerable quantities of water were used in extinguishing the blaze and portions of the mill were flooded however it did not interrupt the paper machines and other parts of the mill from the regular routine.

FIRST DOLLAR DAY WILL BE HELD HERE SAT.

SPLENDID BARGAINS OFFERED BY LOCAL MERCHANTS; PUT ON SPECIAL DOLLAR DAY OFFERINGS; EXPECT BIG DAY

For the first time in the history of the city the merchants of Wisconsin Rapids, nearly thirty of them, have joined cooperatively offering the buying public special bargains on Dollar Day, which was set by them for Jan. 29th. The cooperative plan of working up a big bargain day for the townspeople and the rural people has been considered for some time and it was through their willingness to make especial inducements that the splendid bargain day was arranged. One of the largest bargain crowds in the history of the city is expected tomorrow.

Decorate Windows

The windows have been arranged and decorated by the local merchants showing the Dollar Day offerings and listing of bargains which will be offered. Each Dollar Day Store has large cards in the window telling that it will offer bargains on Dollar Day. In reviewing the lists of Dollar Day bargains it is safe to say that the offerings are the most attractive that have been made to the public in many a day. The bargains are many of them in club groups, several articles for one dollar. Some stores offer dollar reductions, and some are selling outright much more highly priced articles for one dollar only on Dollar Day. Some are offering dollar down and dollar a month terms on the purchase of articles.

High Class Goods

The bargains are not made up of old goods, shop worn articles and seconds but new goods and are backed by the reputation of the merchants and the Tribune. Both the merchants and the Tribune will vouch for the quality of the goods, maintaining that they are of regular quality and are picked directly from the regular stocks.

The following stores are the ones who have made Dollar Day, Jan. 29th possible: W. G. Henke Grocery, Johnson & Hill Co., The Madison, Model Drug Store, Howard's Variety Store, Nash Hardware Co., Matthews Bros. Music Shop, Millers Store, Steinberg's Style Shop, The Fair Store, Wisconsin Rapids Bakery, Renee Hat Shop, Otto's Pharmacy, Fridstein Inc., Normington Bros., People's Cash & Carry Grocery, A. H. Kleberg Grocery, Reichel's Jewelry Store, Fridstein-Anderson, Smith & Kaltenecker, Kruger & Turbin Co., Staub's Electric Shop, Blommer Ice Cream Co., W. C. Weisel, First National Bank, People's Tailoring Co., Wisconsin Rapids Tribune Co., and I. E. Wilcox.

TAYLOR HEADS STOVE CONCERN

COMPANY SHOWS PROSPEROUS GROWTH; PLANNING EXPANSION FOR NEXT; OPERATE PLANT TWELVE MONTHS

T. A. Taylor was elected president of the Prentiss-Wabers Stove Co. at their annual meeting, succeeding himself in the office in which he has served for several years. The other officers are:

Vice. Pres.—A. J. Hasbrouck.
Sec.-Treas.—D. B. Philleo.
Directors—E. B. Redford and C. D. Searls.

Report Good Year

The reports of the officers showed that the company has enjoyed one of the most prosperous years since they have been organized and that for the first time in their history they operated for the full twelve months of the year. Pres. Taylor states that thru extensive advertising and effort they have very good connections with the best outing goods jobbers and the outing stove made in this city is reaching every part of the United States as well as foreign countries. The orders for the new spring trade are already coming in to the firm, he says, which indicates an early opening of what is predicted will be the biggest business the company has ever experienced.

May Increase Force

The company has employed steadily the past year about twenty-five men and turned out an average of eighty stoves a day. The number of men may be increased in the near future, the officers say, and the production of stoves may be boosted to more than one hundred a day. There will probably be no change in the present price of the outing stove, the improvements which have been made in it lately taking up all the difference in the market price of metals and other materials which they use. The market conditions, however, are considerably relieved over a year ago, Mr. Taylor says, it being comparatively easy to get any material now.

AWARD ANNA BUTTKE $800 HEART BALM

TAKES JURY FIVE AND ONE-HALF HOURS TO DECIDE DAMAGES; DROP CASE OF SEDUCTION STARTED

Mrs. Anna Buttke, of Marshfield, was awarded $800 damages in circuit court here Thursday evening after the jury had deliberated about five and one-half hours. The damages were awarded against August Mews, of the same city, on a charge of breach of promise which the woman made, and in which she asked $2,500. The case went to the jury at about three o'clock Thursday afternoon when Attorneys Williams & Williams of Marshfield had completed their arguments for the plaintiff and Goggins, Brazeau & Goggins had completed their arguments for the defendant.

Answer Two Questions

The jury unswered two questions which Judge Park gave to them for consideration, the first being:

"Did the defendant in June, 1917, promise to marry the plaintiff?"

The answer to jury brought in was "Yes."

The second question was:

"If the court should determine that the plaintiff is entitled to judgment at what sum do you assess her damages?"

The answer was, "$800."

Fill Court Room

A large number of spectators who had gathered in the court room to hear the case listened to the final pleas of the lawyers which were taken before the jury Thursday afternoon. Atty. Theo. W. Brazeau and Atty. Hugh W. Goggins both spoke for the defendant while both Attys. P. A. and R. R. Williams spoke before the jury for their client.

Both of the parties in the case told stories which were practically similar in much of the detail. Mrs. Buttke stated that Mews used to come to her home over week ends when he came into town, he being a contractor who often had work out in the country which would keep him out of the city much of the time. She admitted, as he did, that very intimate relations had existed between them, the difference in their stories being that she alleges that he had promised to marry her while he denied that part of it.

FARES ARE HIGH; MIGHT BE HIGHER

A. L. Atwood, agent for the Soo Line in this city, has presented the Tribune with some interesting figures regarding railroad fares, in which he shows that while fares in this country seem high, they are low compared with those paid in some countries abroad. His comparisons are as follows:

Fare from Duluth, Minn., to Brooten, Minn., 187 miles is $7.39; fare from Manchester, Eng., to London, Eng., 183½ miles, $11.07.

Fare from Chicago, Ill., to Wyndmere, N. D., is 696 miles is $24.56; fare from Paris, France, to Venice, Italy, 687 miles is $61.39.

The fare from Chicago, Ill., to Colfax, Wis., 370 miles is $14.36; the fare from Paris, France, to Geneva, Switzerland, 376 miles, is $25.68.

Fare from Chicago to Enderlin, N. D., 729 miles is $25.88; and from Paris France, to Florence, Italy, 731½ miles $54.45.

These are all first class fares and fares applying to and from U. S. points include the war tax.

RATHER CONFUSING

The foreigner coming to America is assimilated quicker than the American who goes to a foreign country. Linguists say that foreigners, especially Europeans, are more adept at learning languages than other peoples. Americans, they say, are the poorest linguists of all. Read the following clipping from an exchange and you will agree that the European who can fathom the ticket agents' lingo is a pretty smart individual. It takes a little mental gymnastics on the American's part to follow this:

He was no traveling man. That much was noticed by a clerk in the consolidated city ticket office at Main Street and Court Avenue.

"Let me have sleeping car accommodations on the train to New York," said the man, approaching the clerk cautiously.

"For a single passenger?" asked the clerk, smiling

"No," replied the man. "I'm married, but I am not taking anybody with me A single shelf will answer, I suppose."

"Upper or lower?" again asked the clerk.
"What's the difference?" inquired the passenger.

"A difference of about $4," answered the clerk.

The passenger paused, as he fumbled his money, and the clerk explained:

"You understand, of course, the lower is higher than the upper. The higher price is for the lower berth. If you want it lower, you'll have to go higher. We sell the upper berth lower then the lower In other words, the higher the lower."

"Why do they all ask for the lower?" asked the man

"On account of its convenience," replied the clerk hastily "Most persons don't like the upper, although it's lower, on account of it being higher, and because when you occupy an upper, you have got to get up to your bed and then get down when you get up. I would advise you to take the lower, although it's higher than the upper, for the reason I have stated, that the upper is lower than the lower, because it is higher. You can have the lower if you pay higher; but if you are willing to go higher it will be lower."

For a time it seemed as though it would be necessary to call an ambulance to send the bewildered customer to a hospital.

BIG DANCE AT PORT EDWARDS

Thursday evening, one the largest dances ever held in Port Edwards was put on at the new Auditorium there. The dancing started about night. At all times the floor was crowded to the music furnished by the Imperial Quintette which is composed of Cleve Akey, piano, Favell, cornet, Cibula, violin, Natwick, banjo and Parkin, traps.

The music seemed to instill life into the dancers as the party increased in "pep" and liveliness as the evening went on. There were several circular two-steps or "Paul Jones" called out by Hugh Madden, of Port Edwards and all joined hands, taking the partner that happened to be closest when the caller stoped the ring.

A punch bowl located in front of the stage was always surrounded by those whose thirst demanded attention. Dainty cakes were also served.

Hubby Ever Thoughtful of the Treasure He Had Won for a Partner in Life's Joys.

It was her birthday, but he had rushed off to business with just the usual duty-peck at her upturned face, and she was left to worry the day through, oppressed by the thought that his love was waning.

When he returned at night, wished her "many happy returns," gave her a full-size hug, and placed a tiny packet in her hand, she knew that she had wronged him. He was still the same generous-hearted Romeo who had wooed and won her.

"And I thought you'd forgotten all about it, Harold," she cooed, as she carefully unwrapped the package. Then a black-edged expression took a front seat on her features.

"Pipe-cleaners!" she gasped.

"Yes, pet," he said, "I knew they'd please you. You never did like me to use your hatpins!"

PIGS WENT ON BIG "SPREE"

Ignorant Farm Hand Was Unaware of the Potency for Evil That Lies in Decayed Apples.

At Singac, N. J., some days ago, traffic was blocked in four directions by a small army of intoxicated pigs belonging to Harold Brown, who had employed Jed Van Giesen as hired man and forgot to ask him if he were experienced. Van Giesen, left to his own devices while Brown was in Newark, decided to clean up the apple orchard. He carefully separated the fruit, placing the rotten apples in baskets and dumping them into the hog pen. Being a green hand he did not know that an apple left to itself becomes a high-power distillery. Toward evening Van Gieson went to Paterson, while the pigs went on a spree. They tore down fences and were soon on the highways and byways. Big pigs and little pigs were soon dotting the scenery, and when Brown returned from Newark he spent a very unpleasant evening restoring the intoxicated bacon to its proper home.

Sugar Beet Harvester.

A machine for topping and digging beets, which, according to the Scientific American, promises to eliminate much of the back-breaking work of harvesting, has recently been perfected. The apparatus resembles a potato digger in general outline, but in front of the lifts that remove the roots from the ground is a revolving disk 20 inches in diameter, so adjusted by a spring and roller that it measures the cutting distance from the top of the beet instead of from the ground. Immediately behind the disk are two lifts that remove the beets from the ground and deliver them to an endless chain elevator that frees them of dirt and dumps them out behind the machine. As the top and head of the sugar beet contain an acid that counteracts the sugar in the rest of the root, a harvester must measure the beets and cut them at the right place.—Youth's Companion.

Clever Deduction.

Sherlock Holmes-like detectives still exist. In London, England, an unknown man was run over by a train taken to the hospital, and although he never recovered consciousness, lived and talked in delirium for a few hours It was noticed that he counted all the time, and the doctor perceived that he never counted above a certain number. He remembered this, and recalled that the number was that of the nails in a horse's shoe. He decided the man must be a blacksmith, informed the police, and his relatives were found from this little clue.

Rejoice, Ye Baldheads!

Sheep's wool and human hair have been made to grow with nearly twice their usual vigor by feeding ceratin, a sulphur and nitrogenous compound which is the foundation principle of hair and horns. The discoverer has to shave twice a day now, and bald-headed men are demanding that the material be placed upon the market.

Some Very Old Trees

Yew trees grow to a great age. Those at Torentain's abbey, Yorkshire, England, were old in 1132. California has trees thousands of years old in the Mariposa grove, and baobab trees in Africa are over four centuries old.

PARADED IN WEDDING FINERY

Peculiar Custom of Eighteenth-Century New England Would Seem to Put Premium on Vanity.

An unusual custom in vogue in New England in the Eighteenth century which caused newly married couples to appear at church on the four Sundays following their union dressed in all the bridal finery they could get together, is recorded by Edward J. Morris in his book, "The Psychology of Dress."

"This, of course, stimulated a rivalry between families, not likely to further the Puritan aim of modesty in appearance. Those who could afford it had four distinct sets of finery, one for each Sunday, that there might be no monotony for those who formed the audience. In many communities a pew was set apart in which the bridal pair was shown, so that the congregation knew just where to look for the objects of interest.

"These selected seats were often in the gallery, sometimes the front pews of the center aisle, and at times in other prominent places. The couple generally arrived a bit late, that the observers might all be seated before their arrival; then they walked slowly arm in arm to the assigned seats, while the entire congregation gave their hushed and respectful attention. At an appointed time, generally just before the sermon, the couple arose and turned slowly around two or three times, that every angle of their appearance might be viewed; they then sat down."

FINEST OF EARTH'S CHURCHES

Men of Genius Through Many Centuries Aided in the Erection of St. Peter's at Rome.

The history of St. Peter's at Rome, one of the world's most interesting edifices, goes back over a thousand years, for it was on this spot, the site of Nero's circus, within walls ornate with gold and glistening with mosaic and marble, that Charlemagne received the crown of imperial Rome from Pope Leo III., and here was slowly erected throughout subsequent centuries this building, called the central cathedral of Christendom. All that man could do to make St. Peter's great and beautiful has been lavished upon that splendid church. Mme. de Stael said of it, "C'est le seul travail de l'art sur notre terre actuelle qui ait le genre de grandeur qui characterise les oeuvres immediates de la creation." (It is the sole work of art on our earth which has the sort of nobleness that characterizes the works of nature.) Marion Crawford puts one's first impression of St. Peter's in a nutshell when he says, "The first sight of St. Peter's affects one as though in every day streets, walking among one's fellows, one should meet with a man forty feet high."

While the interior decorations have been criticized as being too profuse—an American tourist once referred to them as "too much gingerbread"—that great roof covers the work of some of the most renowned sculptors of the world.

Fish's Nest in a Clam Shell.

The goby (of which there are many kinds) selects the clean valve of a clam and uses this as the ready-made nest. The pair (for the goby mates with but one and is jealous of any rival) hover round an inverted valve and then the male scoops out the sand from underneath it, forming a cavity, the shell being slightly tilted and pressed into the sand. The female then enters the cavity and deposits her eggs on the lower (inner) surface of the shell. These eggs are somewhat cigar-shaped structures, fixed at one end by a glutinous network that secures them firmly to the shell. Having done her work, the female then exchanges places with the male, who remains on guard, keeping up a constant current of water over the eggs by movements of the pectoral fins, and darting out at the approach of an intruder.

Rubber Shoes Life Savers.

A fact which is probably only slightly known is the immunity from the attacks of lightning which is afforded by wearing a pair of rubbers.

The person who assumes these coverings must be careful not to come in contact with anything except the floor. Providing he follows this instruction he can not possibly be injured by the lightning in any way.

The explanation is simple enough. The electric fluid before it can pass into a human being or animal must first come in contact with the earth. Its passage from the earth to the wearer of the rubbers is, of course, stopped by the soles of the latter.

So next time a storm is brewing hurry up and get out your rubbers.

Dolls With African Burial.

Art galleries in New York last year exhibited specimens of African doll-makers. Perhaps the most interesting story of dolls in Africa is that which concerns the doll custom of a tribe dwelling near Lake Nyassa. When a member of the tribe dies a rough image of the dead person is made of rags or wood and laid away in a tent. Thousands of doll images of dead tribe members lie in the tent, and it is said that the tribe believes that the dolls are the embodiment of the souls of the dead men. By keeping the souls on earth they believe they are cheating the fiends which are supposed to lurk beyond life. The tent is regarded as sacred and only the medicine men are permitted near it.

All Houses Have Tablet Telling Name of the Responsible Dweller Within the Walls.

In Japan you can learn a good many things about the resident of a house merely by looking at his door. According to police regulations, says a writer in Chambers' Journal the entrance to every residence must have a small wooden tablet affixed to it. This tablet has the name and the number of the house on it, and on another tablet is the name of the responsible householder, who in many cases is an infant, a younger brother of a relative.

Sometimes, though rarely, the names of other inmates are placed over the door, but there is no police regulation that requires it, except in the case of boarding houses, which have to place their boarders' names outside for all to see. A person fortunate enough to possess a telephone always has the number proudly displayed over his entrance. Near it you will often see a quaint enameled or tin disk. That is the fire insurance mark. Every fire insurance company has its own special metal plate, which it nails to the lintel when it insures a house.

There are always several small pieces of paper pasted over the door, placed there by the police. One is to certify that the periodical oshoji, or great cleaning, has taken place. Another paper tells us, perhaps, that the sanitary conditions are satisfactory. What others stand for is known only to the police themselves; that they give secret information about the inmates is certain.

Formerly it was the rule that, if there was a well upon the premises, the fact had to be proclaimed by a square board marked with the character for well—ido. This was to show where people could obtain water in case of fire in the neighborhood. The regulation may still be in force in country places, but owing to water now being piped, it is no longer enforced in the cities.

In Hawaii, the Philippines and Cuba one of the chief topics of interest to the islanders is the arrival and departure of steamers. Newspapers devote whole pages to these boat movements, to lists of the passengers, interviews with notables on board and stories of the voyage by members of the officers' staffs and crews. In fact, the arrival of the evening train in a mainland country town holds no more interest for the residents than the maritime news has for the people of Honolulu, Manila and Havana. The Cuban capital has a new object of interest in this regard in the lately instituted daily air service between that city and Key West. The planes are of the United States

America's First Street Railroad.

French Claim to Mont Blanc.

Mont Blanc, the "monarch of mountains," as Byron called it, is mainly in France, and the ascent is commonly made from Chamonix. Chamonix and Mont Blanc are in the French department of Haute-Savoie. And the fact that most persons believe them to be in Switzerland annoys the French very much indeed, especially the residents of that region. So there is a campaign on foot now to rebaptize the "department de la Haute-Savoie" and call it "department du Mont Blanc."

PARADED IN WEDDING FINERY

Peculiar Custom of Eighteenth Century New England Would Seem to Put Premium on Vanity.

An unusual custom in vogue in New England in the Eighteenth century which caused newly married couples to appear at church on the four Sundays following their union dressed in all the bridal finery they could get together, is recorded by Edward J. Morris in his book, "The Psychology of Dress."

"This, of course, stimulated a rivalry between families, not likely to further the Puritan aim of modesty in appearance. Those who could afford it had four distinct sets of finery, one for each Sunday, that there might be no monotony for those who formed the audience. In many communities a pew was set apart in which the bridal pair was shown, so that the congregation knew just where to look for the objects of interest.

"These selected seats were often in the gallery, sometimes the front pews of the center aisle, and at times in other prominent places. The couple generally arrived a bit late, that the observers might all be seated before their arrival; then they walked slowly arm in arm to the assigned seats, while the entire congregation gave their hushed and respectful attention. At an appointed time, generally just before the sermon, the couple arose and turned slowly around two or three times, that every angle of their appearance might be viewed; they then sat down."

FINEST OF EARTH'S CHURCHES

Men of Genius Through Many Centuries Aided in the Erection of St. Peter's at Rome.

The history of St. Peter's at Rome, one of the world's most interesting edifices, goes back over a thousand years, for it was on this spot, the site of Nero's circus, within walls ornate with gold and glistening with mosaic and marble, that Charlemagne received the crown of Imperial Rome from Pope Leo III., and here was slowly erected throughout subsequent centuries this building, called the central cathedral of Christendom. All that man could do to make St. Peter's great and beautiful has been lavished upon that splendid church. Mme. de Stael said of it, "C'est le seul travail de l'art sur notre terre actuelle qui ait le genre de grandeur qui claracterise les oeuvres immediates de la creation." (It is the sole work of art on our earth which has the sort of nobleness that characterizes the works of nature.) Marion Crawford puts one's first impression of St. Peter's in a nutshell when he says, "The first sight of St. Peter's affects one as though on every day streets, walking among one's fellows, one should meet with a man forty feet high."

While the interior decorations have been criticized as being too profuse—an American tourist once referred to them as "too much gingerbread"—that great roof covers the work of some of the most renowned sculptors of the world.

Fish's Nest in a Clam Shell.

The goby (of which there are many kinds) selects the clean valve of a clam and uses this as the ready-made nest. The pair (for the goby mates with but one and is jealous of any rival) hover round an inverted valve and then the male scoops out the sand from underneath it, forming a cavity, the shell being slightly tilted and pressed into the sand. The female then enters the cavity and deposits her eggs on the lower (inner) surface of the shell. These eggs are somewhat cigar-shaped structures, fixed at one end by a glutinous network that secures them firmly to the shell. Having done her work, the female then exchanges places with the male, who remains on guard, keeping up a constant current of water over the eggs by movements of the pectoral fins, and darting out at the approach of an intruder.

Rubber Shoes Life Savers.

A fact which is probably only slightly known is the immunity from the attacks of lightning which is afforded by wearing a pair of rubbers.

The person who assumes these coverings must be careful not to come in contact with anything except the floor. Providing he follows this instruction he can not possibly be injured by the lightning in any way.

The explanation is simple enough. The electric fluid before it can pass into a human being or animal must first come in contact with the earth. Its passage from the earth to the wearer of the rubbers is, of course, stopped by the soles of the latter.

So next time a storm is brewing hurry up and get out your rubbers.

Dolls With African Burial.

Art galleries in New York last year exhibited specimens of African doll-makers. Perhaps the most interesting story of dolls in Africa is that which concerns the doll custom of a tribe dwelling near Lake Nyassa. When a member of the tribe dies a rough image of the dead person is made of rags or wood and laid away in a tent. Thousands of doll images of dead tribe members lie in the tent, and it is said that the tribe believes that the dolls are the embodiment of the souls of the dead men. By keeping the souls on earth they believe they are chasing the fiends which are supposed to lurk beyond life. The tent is regarded as sacred and only the medicine men are permitted near it.

STATE NAMED BY EXPLORER

Why Territory Was Called "California" Was Long a Puzzle to Even Profound Scholars.

In "The Natural Wealth of California," Titus Fey Cronise says: "There are few countries, the names of which are involved in as much mystery as that of California. A compound of Greek and Latin, it is not positively known by whom or when compounded, nor the reason why, although many profound scholars in Europe and in the United States have endeavored during the past century to trace its origin.

To substantiate this claim of discovery the historians generally refer to a letter written to King Carlos V by Cortez, dated October 15, 1521, in which information is given of the reported discovery of an island of Amazons.

Geronimo, an Indian student, who spent months in searching Spanish books of ancient date, declares the name was invented by Cortez following a report of an island inhabited by women only off the coast of what is now California. He looked on the calendar of saints, and finding Saint Calixto and Saint Fortunata there, he combined the two by using the first part of each name, and added the suffix "nia." With this "California" he started out to find the island and bestow his invented name upon it.

Spread Propaganda on Coins.

Propaganda, like surgery, has made some remarkable advances during the war. A correspondent in Berlin sends us a curious example of one development. It consists of two 1-mark notes both of which have been torn through the center as a result of being folded too often. They have been joined together by strips of adhesive paper, and each strip bears a legend printed in red ink.

The translation of one runs: "Why is the mark worth only 10 pfennig? Ask Ludendorff and Ebert!" The other inquires, "Why is the mark so tattered? Because the state finances are tattered."

No private person is likely to have taken the trouble to equip himself with plasters that are at once adhesive and controversial. Presumably they are a government issue of the banks, so that worn-out paper money may be put on its legs again for further circulation and at the same time a blow be dealt to the government's old enemies.

PESSIMISTIC.

First Politician — Every man has his price.

Second Politician—Yes, and it is going up all the time.

OLD SHIPS.

There is a memory stays upon old ships,
A wistfulness curges in the rusty hold—
Of brilliant lagoons and prow-caressing lips,
Of stormy midnights—and a tale untold
They have remembered islands in the dark,
And windy capes that tried their slender spars
And tortuous channels where their keels have gone,
And calm blue heights of stillness and the stars.

Ah, never think that ships forget a shore
Or bitter seas, or winds that made them wise;
There is a dream upon them, ever more—
And there be some who say that sunk ships rise
To seek familiar harbors in the night,
Blowing in mists, their spectral sails like light.
—David Morton, in Los Angeles Times.

Marriage a Matter of Business.

Hiring Finnish men to marry Russian women to enable the latter to get out of Russia has become a popular and lucrative business in border towns. The ungallant Finns exact a high price but the method is unfailing. It makes a Finnish subject of the woman, and is recognized as lawful by the two countries, which have assumed diplomatic relations. Endless trouble ensues, of course, if the woman thus freed of Russia refuses to part with her pseudo-husband.

Convict Claims "Overtime."

What is believed to be the first claim for "overtime" ever filed by a convict has just been presented by a man named Martin, who served a term in the Sante prison, France. There were two Martins serving sentences at the same jail, for different periods. At the expiration of one sentence the wrong Martin was released, and the mistake was not discovered until a week later. Now the Martin who was detained is demanding "overtime" at the rate of $10 a day.

Daddy's Own Fault.

Betty and June were playing with their father.

June was so rough her father said: "June, you should have been a boy."

To which she replied: "Why didn't you pay more and get one?"

Starling Nested in Sheep's Wool.

When a fine sheep was being shorn on an Australian farm a starling's nest with one egg was found in its wool; at least so it was reported to the newspapers.

DETERMINED TO MAKE BACHELORS GET MARRIED

Paris, Jan. 28—Bachelors of Paris are to be taxed to pay bonuses to babies. The General Council of the Seine has decided that mothers giving birth to a third child shall receive 350 francs, 400 francs for the fourth child and 450 for all children beyond the fourth.

This system will apply to illegitimate as well as to legitimate children.

STATE NAMED BY EXPLORER

Why Territory Was Called "California" Was Long a Puzzle to Even Profound Scholars.

In "The Natural Wealth of California," Titus Fey Cronise says: "There are few countries, the names of which are involved in as much mystery as that of California. A compound of Greek and Latin, it is not positively known by whom or when compounded, nor the reason why, although many profound scholars in Europe and in the United States have endeavored during the past century to trace its origin.

"To substantiate this claim of discovery the historians generally refer to a letter written to King Carlos V by Cortez, dated October 15, 1521, in which information is given of the reported discovery of an island of Amazons.

"Geronimo, an Indian student, who spent months in searching Spanish books of ancient date, declares the name was invented by Cortez following a report of an island inhabited by women only off the coast of what is now California. He looked on the calendar of saints, and finding Saint Calixto and Saint Fortunata there, he combined the two by using the first part of each name, and added the sufix "nia." With this "California" he started out to find the island and bestow his invented name upon it.

Spread Propaganda on Coins.

Propaganda, like surgery, has made some remarkable advances during the war. A correspondent in Berlin sends us a curious example of one development. It consists of two 1-mark notes both of which have been torn through the center as a result of being folded too often. They have been joined together by strips of adhesive paper, and each strip bears a legend printed in red ink.

The translation of one runs: "Why is the mark worth only 10 pfennig? Ask Ludendorff and Ebert!" The other inquires, "Why is the mark so tattered? Because the state finances are tattered."

No private person is likely to have taken the trouble to equip himself with plasters that are at once adhesive and controversial. Presumably they are a government issue of the banks, so that worn-out paper money may be put on its legs again for further circulation and at the same time a blow be dealt to the government's old enemies.

PESSIMISTIC.

First Politician—Every man has his price.

Second Politician—Yes, and it is going up all the time.

OLD SHIPS.

There is a memory stays upon old ships
A wistfulness cargo in the musty hold
Of ancient barrooms and prow caressing
Pipes
Of dreamy nightlights and a tale untold
They have remembered islands in the Gulf,
And windy capes that tried their stubborn
Spars
And tortuous channels where their keels
have gone,
And calm blue heights of stillness and
the stars.

Ah, never think that ships forget a shore
Or bitter seas, or winds that made them
wise;
There is a dream upon them, ever more—
And there be some who say that sunk
ships rise
To seek familiar harbors in the night,
Blowing in mists, their spectral sails
like light.

Marriage a Matter of Business.

Hiring Finnish men to marry Russian women to enable the latter to get out of Russia has become a popular and lucrative business in border towns. The ungallant Finns exact a high price but the method is unfailing. It makes a Finnish subject of the woman, and is recognized as lawful by the two countries, which have assumed diplomatic relations. Endless trouble ensues, of course, if the woman thus freed of Russia refuses to part with her pseudo-husband.

Convict Claims "Overtime."

What is believed to be the first claim for "overtime" ever filed by a convict has just been presented by a man named Martin, who served a term in the Sante prison, France. There were two Martins serving sentences at the same jail, for different periods. At the expiration of one sentence the wrong Martin was released, and the mistake was not discovered until a week later. Now the Martin who was detained is demanding "overtime" at the rate of $10 a day.

Speaking of the brontosaurus, if any one ever did, one might paraphrase Goleit Burgess:

Yet, according to reports from African explorers a live dinosaur, a brontosaurus has been found in Africa.

Now the: the dinosaur is with us, potentially, big game enthusiasts will be interested in this description of prehistoric big game, quoted from a communication to the National Geographic society by Barnum Brown:

"Today we must go to Africa for the biggest game: but there was a time in the dim distant past when America produced animals larger than any now living. That was so long ago that nothing remains of these creatures except their bones, and they are turned to stone.

"The animals are dinosaurs; for the moment we will call them lizards—not the creeping, crawling kind but huge reptiles that stalked upright through the jungles, rivaling in size the elephant, the hippopotamus and the rhinoceros.

"The place is Alberta, Canada, and the time of their existence 3,000,000 years ago.

"In these marshes of prehistoric times dwelt a host of reptiles, some large, some small and of various forms, flesh eaters and herb eaters, but all sharing certain characters in common and known as dinosaurs. Not any were closely related to any living reptile, yet they had some characters common to the lizards, crocodiles and birds.

"Of the kinds characteristic of the period one species, a herb eater named Trachodon, was more than 30 feet long and about 15 feet high when standing erect. Its head, with broadly-expanded mouth, resembles that of a duck, but back of the beak there are more than 2,000 small teeth, disposed in many vertical rows each containing several individual teeth, the new ones coming up from below as the old ones wore out.

"The long hind legs terminated in three large-hoofed toes, and the shorter, slender front feet were partly webbed. A long, thin, slender tail acted as a powerful swimming organ, and the body was covered with rough tuberculate skin. Having no means of defense, it lived chiefly in the water, where it was free from attacks of the flesh eaters."

SEA SLEDS FOR AIRPLANES

Speed of Giant Floats Makes the Taking Off From Small Space a Matter of Ease.

Giant sea sleds capable of carrying airplanes out in midocean are being developed by a Boston concern. Some are equipped with four motors, totaling 1,750 horsepower, and have a speed of 55 miles an hour.

In the event of war with a foreign nation these sea sleds would be utilized to transport heavy bombing planes across the ocean. Thousands could be sent at a comparatively low cost.

While it is possible for an airplane to leave the deck of a sea sled, there is not sufficient room for a landing to be made. The flying machine would have to work out its own salvation once its wheels left the sled.

These sea sleds are built to lift and run on the surface of the water. When a speed of 50 miles an hour is reached it is possible for an airplane to open its motors and leave the deck without any further runway.

Experiments made off the New England coast show that a small airplane can "take off" when the sea sled is making but 40 miles an hour in a heavy sea. Other tests are being made to develop the high power planing sea sleds into pleasure craft as well as for military and naval purposes.

Gordon S. Orme of New Orleans, a wealthy sportsman has had a 32-footer built for his use in the Gulf of Mexico. Factories have been established in Atlantic City to aid in producing the sea sleds, which are now being tested off the New England coast.

LUCERNE: THE HOSTESS OF SWITZERLAND

Lucerne, scene of important conferences among allied statesmen, is a precious jewel among Swiss cities with the lake of the same name for its setting—a lake where varied beauty and historic association are blended.

On that lake's shores William Tell is reputed to have exhibited his marksmanship to the discomfiture of Gessler, and on its waters tradition holds he won his revenge by seizing the rudder of the vessel on which that tyrant held him prisoner and guided it to the rock where he aimed, not at an apple, but at his oppressor's heart.

Less picturesque, but more significant, was the formulation of the perpetual league. That famous instrument not only was the antecedent of the Swiss confederation, but marked a mile post in humanity's political freedom.

Beloved by tourists and crowded with them in normal years, Lucerne has retained many of its ancient aspects. Its crumbling wall with its watch towers give it a medieval stamp; two of its covered wooden bridges also serve as art galleries. On the walls of one are depicted scenes of the city's history and the other has paintings of the "Dance of Death."

Perhaps the most famed art object of the city is the Lion of Lucerne, considered by one critic "the most appropriate and touching monument in existence." In a grotto, hewn from the natural rock, is a dying lion pierced by a lance, with his paw protecting the fleur-de-lys of the Bourbons. Thorwaldsen, Danish sculptor, designed this tribute to the Swiss guard who died in seeking to protect Louis XVI against the mob of Paris revolutionists that stormed the Tuileries in 1792.

Many quaint houses remain, including the wooden structures whose inflammability gave rise to curious fire regulations. Wood for building could not lie in the streets more than 24 hours. No smithy could work between vespers and early mass. Every citizen was a potential fire fighter and the citizens' brigade when called to a fire had to await word from the mayor for dismissal. Women were required to aid at night by holding lights in the doorways. Until two centuries ago the city fathers were assigned special duties in fire fighting.

FAMED FOR GIANT POTATOES

District Just North of Denver Has Established Its Reputation for the Succulent Vegetable.

When Horace Greeley gave the young men of America a loose foot by saying, some decades ago: "Go West, young man," he incidentally succeeded in getting a very fine brand of potatoes named for himself, writes William G. Shepherd in the Saturday Evening Post. A group of men who went to the West at that time settled in a district north of Denver and east of the Rocky mountains, and perhaps, because they thought of nothing else to raise, they planted potatoes. About them, in the highlands, the only wild potatoes in the United States were growing luxuriantly. This district is similar climatically and otherwise to the highland district in Chile, where explorers are believed to have come across the potato for the first time. These Colorado wild potatoes propagated themselves by means of seeds, and it is from the pods of these seeds that the Colorado potato experts get the material by means of which they have produced the Greeleyville potato.

Eastern railroads, on which huge baked potatoes, served in the dining cars, have come to be strong allies of the passenger agent and heavy drawers of patronage, send to the Colorado district for the potato giants. Transcontinental railroads which use the northern route send men into the Montana and Dakota fields to pick out, almost by hand, huge potatoes which have been grown from the Colorado seed.

"SIMON PURE" A STAGE HERO

Name of Hero of Popular Comedy Has Become Synonymous for the Genuine Article.

The expression, "Simon Pure," meaning "the real man," had its origin in the name of a Pennsylvania Quaker in Mrs. Centlivre's comedy, "A Bold Stroke for a Wife." Being about to visit London to attend the quarterly meeting of his sect, Aminadab Holdfast sends a letter of recommendation and introduction by his friend, Simon Pure, to another Quaker, who is guardian of Anne Lovely, a young lady reputed to have a fortune of £30,000. Colonel Feignwell, another character in the same play, being enamored of Miss Lovely and her fortune, avails himself of an accidental discovery of the letter of introduction and succeeds in passing himself off as Simon Pure. But virtue is triumphant in the end. Simon Pure appears with his witnesses and the scoundrelly Feignwell is exposed.

The play scored a great success, and the name of "Simon Pure" was gradually applied to anything which was genuine and above imitation.

John Little, one of the progressive farmers of the town of Rudolph was a caller at this office on Thursday and had his name enrolled on the daily subscription list.

James Irwin and A. E. Belows of Oshkosh transacted business in this city Thursday.

The expression, "Simon Pure," meaning "the real man," had its origin in the name of a Pennsylvania Quaker in Mrs. Centlivre's comedy, "A Bold Stroke for a Wife." Being about to visit London to attend the quarterly meeting of his sect, Aminadab Holdfast sends a letter of recommendation and introduction by his friend, Simon Pure, to another Quaker, who is guardian of Anne Lovely, a young lady reputed to have a fortune of £30,000. Colonel Feignwell, another character in the same play, being enamored of Miss Lovely and her fortune, avails himself of an accidental discovery of the letter of introduction and succeeds in passing himself off as Simon Pure. But virtue is triumphant in the end. Simon Pure appears with his witnesses and the scoundrelly Feignwell is exposed.

The play scored a great success, and the name of "Simon Pure" was gradually applied to anything which was genuine and above imitation.

Playing Mother and Father to His Baby Brother

This is a common sight in Poland today, eight and ten-year-old children mothering and fathering their baby brothers and sisters. This photograph, secured by an American Jewish Relief worker at Brest-Litovsk, shows an eight-year-old boy feeding his little brother from a bowl of hot soup just secured at a feeding station supported through American funds. The relief workers found 10,000 children, mostly war orphans, living in deserted dug-outs at Brest-Litovsk.

It is to aid such waifs as these that the European Relief Council has been formed by merging the relief activities of the American Relief Administration, the American Red Cross, the American Friends' Service Committee (Quakers), the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

LAID BIBLE SCENES IN CHINA

Native Artist Had No Conception of Any Other Land Outside of His Own.

In north Fukien province there dwelt an artist who painted pictures on silk for the gentry of his little village. The people in this secluded hamlet nestled amid the hills, had never seen automobiles or airplanes, nor did they take the long journey to Shanghai to watch the great steamers come in laden with merchandise and messages from the ports of the world. But they knew the words of Confucius and Lao-tse and they lived and died with simple dignity as their fathers had done before them. One evening the artist, who had been working all day on a memorial portrait, strolled out into the dark, cool street to refresh his tired soul, writes Elsie F. Weil in Asia Magazine. The tiny white church of the foreign god beyond the tea shop was brilliantly lighted. The artist stood a moment in the open door. The young missionary was talking most eloquently; he was not preaching, but he seemed to be telling stories that were as fascinating as those recited in the bazaars. Almost in spite of himself the artist sank unobtrusively into an empty seat. For the first time he heard some of the beautiful old stories of the Bible, which have held the people of the West enthralled for 2,000 years. And the artist returned to his home and made pictures of the story of Noah and the flood, and of the parables of the lost sheep and of the prodigal son and of many others that were in the book of the western missionary. But he had never heard of the Palestine. To him Noah was Chinese, and the lost sheep belonged to a farmer of his province and the prodigal son might well have been a dissolute youth of his own village.

TWO IDEAS OF CIVIL LIBERTY

Difference Between Governments of Greece and Rome and Those of the Gothic Tribes.

There was this radical difference between the governments of Greece and Rome and those of the Gothic tribes. In the former the state was everything, the individual nothing; the state was thought to have a perfect right to the property, liberty, and even life, of its citizens. In the latter the individual was everything and the state comparatively nothing; all rights were thought to exist, to inhere by nature in the individual, and the state could demand nothing from him for public use without giving him an equivalent. Here we find the fundamental principle of civil liberty; that principle which has been so carefully guarded in the English and in all the Anglo-American constitutions, and which was so happily and tersely expressed by Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence. Our rude Saxon ancestors, though under a kingly government, had more real liberty, and a more just appreciation of the true dignity of man, than had the polished citizens of the republics of the Mediterranean. The legislative authority was vested in the witenage-mote, or assembly of wise men.—Dexter A. Hawkins.

Remorseful Ghost.

A pathetic story is told of the ghost of Bisham abbey. It is said that the wife of Sir Thomas Hobby was unnaturally severe with her son, who, it seems, had a peculiar aversion to writing, and in his obstinacy would wilfully blot his copybooks. One day his mother, enraged at his perverseness, lost her self-control and beat the poor boy so unmercifully that he died from his injuries. Since then one of the bedrooms in the abbey has been haunted by the specter of the cruel woman, who glides through the chamber in the act of washing the bloodstains from her hands.

It is stated that some years ago, when an old window shutter of the sixteenth century was removed, "a packet of antique copybooks of that period was discovered pushed into the wall between the joists of the skirting, and several of these books, on which young Hobby's name was written, were covered with blots."

Movie Theaters in Rio.

It is at the cinema theaters that the Cariocas (citizens of Rio de Janeiro) know real comfort; for, unlike our moving-picture houses, those in Rio have spacious waiting-rooms, where you sit, listening to excellent music, until the hour for the first reel comes round. The pioneer house of the kind inaugurated this custom, and now the people refuse to stand outside waiting for the even hour to arrive or to enter after the film has started. With so much profitable space taken from the auditorium, the movies in Rio Janeiro are not as great money-makers as with us. The American favorites are popular, quite ourclassing Italian and Brazilian film stars.—Harriet Chalmers Adams in National Geographic Magazine.

Inspect Moths by Machine.

An elaborate machine called the choseiki is used by the Japanese in the inspection of silkworms for disease. The machine in the inspection house of Nagano prefecture requires 2,000 microscopes and a large corps of workers.

Moths are made to lay their eggs each on one square of sheets of cardboard bearing 28 numbered squares. They then are killed, their bodies pulverized and examined. If the bacilli are found, the square containing the eggs laid by the diseased moths is cut out and burned.—Japan Advertiser.

Early Fireworks.

In Rome, at the creation of the popes, illuminated "hand grenades" were thrown from the tops of castles, and about the commencement of the Fourteenth century fireworks had become an art in which inventors displayed great ability in combining the powers of architecture, sculpture and painting.

SCENE OF MAJESTIC BEAUTY

Table Mountain, for Many Reasons, Is Superior to Any of the Earth's Great Peaks.

I have seen many far-topped hollows of Avalon. I have seen the bare and golden Atlas range drop away into the golden series of Marrow, but I have never seen anything resembling its mighty mass which is at once dominant, the royal tent of the Great Pleasaunce. . . . It is by virtue of its mass and the colossal massiveness which form its walls and Table mountain is majestic, as much by the abruptness of its rise from the wide sea-level. The height of inland mountains is a matter of faith rather than sight; but this mountain, like Etna and the Peak of Teneriffe and others whose roots are in the sea, shows its stature at once to the eye. It rises more immediately from the sea than either of these, yet not so immediately as it appears to do when seen from the bay. It throws out toward the ocean low spurs of mingled rock and green banks. In spring these grassy banks are all set with flowers. Among them is a pretty white flower, about the size of a narcissus, though different in shape, of which I have seen a bouquet in England many weeks after it had been gathered at the Cape, standing in a vase without water and still quite fresh. . . . —Margaret L. Woods.

NEED FOR BALANCE WHEEL

Courage Is, of Course, a Magnificent Thing, But Should Be Regulated by Prudence.

Courage is an indispensable quality in our success; but if it is not balanced and regulated by prudence it will run away with us and lead us into all sorts of foolhardy things. Boldness is a great quality when it is held in check by proper cautiousness and guided by good judgment.

I know a man whose courage is very much over-developed and his faculty of caution is very deficient. He does not know what fear means, and he plunges into all sorts of foolish operations which do not turn out well, and he is always trying to get out of things which he had gone into hastily. If his prudence had been equally developed with his courage, with his boldness, he would have made a very strong man.

Futile endeavors, half-hearted efforts never accomplish anything. It takes the fire of determination, energy, push, and good judgment to accomplish that which counts. It is the well-balanced enthusiastic man with fire in his blood, and ginger in his brain, who makes things move and achieves the seemingly impossible.—Denver Catholic Register.

The Kiss in Ancient Folklore.

A story of Alexander the Great and a kiss forms one of the most thrilling bits of history. An enemy of the king's invented a novel plot to cause Alexander's death. He discovered a beautiful young girl, who, like Rappaccini's daughter in Hawthorne's story, had been brought up on deadly poison, and every one who came near her was killed by her deadly atmosphere. She was sent to the king's palace with instructions to do what would be called "vamping" today. Alexander saw and admired her extravagantly, but he showed Aristotle suspected treachery. Before he allowed the girl to approach the throne he sent for a criminal who had been sentenced to death, and instructed him to kiss the girl in the presence of the king. He fell dead on the spot like one struck by lightning.

The same story appears in folklore of India, and the early Christian monks made great use of it in their sermons, personifying the Christian as Alexander, conscience as Aristotle, sin as the venomous girl, and the world, sense as the criminal. Perhaps it is.

Disagree Over Famous Vine.

On Roanoke Island, off the North Carolina coast, stands an ancient Scuppernong vine. It is said to be the grave of Virginia Dare and the site of the "Lost Colony." Nobody knows the age of that vine, but many other vines, which seem more youthful by comparison, actually are shown to be more than one hundred years old.

A national contribution to American mythology credits Sir Walter Raleigh with having planted the vine where it now stands, and another claims that it is the original Scuppernong. Unimaginative investigators, however, say that the original Scuppernong grew wild in Tyrrell county, North Carolina, along the Scuppernong river, well before 1700 and that from this county the species found its way to Roanoke island.

Shoe-Throwing Old Custom.

Throwing old shoes was not always confined to weddings, though the custom nowadays has come to be associated entirely with the going away of bridal couples. Authorities differ as to the origin of the practice and its exact significance. It seems, however, as if it had to do with the transfer of property—women being regarded as such among the nations in which the custom began.

It was in the sense of confirming a sale or exchange that the Jews understood the removal and giving of a shoe or sandal. When the kinsman of Boaz consented to waive his claim upon the parcel of land which Naomi would sell, he "drew off his shoe," for "this is the custom of Israel."

CURIOSITIES OF FINNY TRIBE

Fishes Gifted With Power of Mimicry to Protect Them From Their Natural Enemies.

Two interesting examples of mimicry among fish are given by a correspondent. The first, found in Ceylon, is shaped and colored like a withered leaf. A certain naturalist, Dr. A. Willey, describes his experience of this curious fish. He was walking along the reef with a fisherman, when the latter attempted to catch a fish for him. The naturalist could not see at first what it was. The fish dodged about, and the fisherman failed to get it. Seizing the net himself, he saw what seemed to be a yellow oak-leaf gently and inertly sinking to the bottom. This being a common occurrence, he was about to turn away, when the supposed leaf righted itself, and darted off. It was finally secured, and was found to be one of those fishes commonly known as sea-bats. The second example is furnished by the very curious fishes called sea-horses. Many long, irregular filaments proceed from their bodies, and give them a striking resemblance to bunches of seaweed. When the fish anchors itself—as it frequently does—by the tail to a plant of seaweed it seems like a part of it, and is not easily detected.

FEARED TO MAKE IT WORSE

Recruit Had His Own Reasons for Not Answering Stuttering Corporal at That Moment.

He was a corporal drill instructor, and though he had an extraordinarily fine word of command, in normal speech he stuttered—and stuttered badly.

One day a new and particularly clumsy recruit joined his squad and the instructor walked up to him to give him a little private lecture.

"Now l-l-look here, my l-l-lad," he began. "You're about the sl-sl-sloppiest thing I've ever had in my sq-sq-squad. You must b-b-buck up. Wha-wha-what's your name?"

There was no answer, and the corporal painfully repeated the question but there was still no answer.

Eventually the sergeant major intervened.

"What's the matter with you, my lad? Why don't you answer the corporal?" he asked.

"B-b-b-because," explained the unfortunate recruit, "I d-d-don't want to m-m-mock him!"

The Proper Place.

Six-year-old Paul was misbehaving in the school ranks when his nine-year-old sister from her place in the next row happened to notice him. Immediately she walked from her place to him and administered a good shaking and a command for him to stand still.

"Why did you shake him, Virginia?" her teacher asked after they were in their room.

"Because if I hadn't shook him his teacher would," she retorted.

The questioning teacher smiled. "But I can't see why if he had to be shaken what difference it made whether you or his teacher did it."

"I can," Virginia was positive. "I wanted to keep it all in the family."

A Non-Literary Lady.

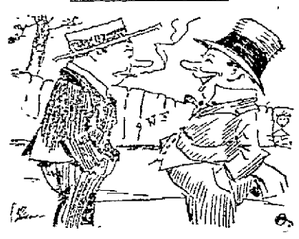
Gamaliel Bradford said at a dinner in Boston:

"It's no use complaining about the quality of American fiction, for this fiction is the kind the public wants.

"A novelist told me the other day that he once toured our city in a 'Seeing Boston' automobile. The automobile rolled through the Back Bay district, and the guide pointed out the stately mansions of the aristocracy.

"Then a lady touched his arm.

"'Say, guide,' she said, 'I've heard a lot about the great Oliver Wendell homes of Boston. Show us a few, will you?'"



A BANG FROM HODGE.

"I nearly died laughing last night."

"Which one of your jokes were you telling?"

Eels' Trysting Place.

The trysting place of the eels, where all the world's eels are born and whither they return to breed and die has been discovered in the ocean, just south of Bermuda, by a Danish expedition.

Grewsome Gambling Implements.

Dice made from the teeth of a notorious French gambler and criminal, and a dice box made from toughened bits of his skin, were among the curiosities sold by a Parisian dealer a short time ago.

DREW CHARACTER FROM LIFE

Thackeray's "Beatrice" Said to Have Been Modeled on Career of Profligate Duchess.

One of the few feminine characters of Thackeray that was not declared insipid by critics, was his Beatrice. She was drawn from real life, and the original was the daughter of Col. Thomas Chudleigh, afterward to become Elizabeth, duchess of Kingston. She married Augustus Hervey, earl of Bristol, after setting all London by the ears with her beauty, spirit and pranks. He was a member of the naval forces, and shortly after their secret wedding was called to sea, and when he returned found his wife the reigning beauty of the court and head over heels in half a dozen affairs, the one with the duke of Kingston being so notorious that even the street gamins knew of it. She managed to bring a suit for a jactitation, and her husband was subject to heavy penalties should he say she was his wife. She then married the duke.

Her great beauty was a storm signal wherever she went in London and Paris, and a long list of duels, ruin and trouble followed her wake. Although she lost a part of her fortune she continued to be received at continental courts up to her death at the age of sixty-eight, as wicked in her final years as in her youth. She got drunk, swore, had a dozen lovers, ruined as many more, and in fact did everything that should have brought her shame and sorrow, but lived a riotous life to the end.

MEDALLION HELD AS CURIO

Only One of a Number Struck in 1825 Is Believed to Be in Existence Today.

To defray the expenses incident to the inauguration of John Quincy Adams as the sixth President of the United States in 1825, the inaugural committee sold medallions at $5 each. Five dollars was considerable money in those days, and the owner of a medallion was entitled to special consideration at the inaugural ceremonies.

As much as the medallions were prized 95 years ago, it is believed that only one exists today, the property of J. A. Larrick, a policeman detailed to Washington police headquarters.

The Adams medallion was given to Larrick 15 years ago by Edward Murphy, who is now dead. Murphy's father, who witnessed the inauguration of President Adams, was the original purchaser of the medal.

At the time he was presented with the medallion, Larrick was a policeman in the First precinct. Murphy was an aged bookkeeper. Larrick on several occasions assisted the old fellow and the medallion was his reward.

Probably the most striking thing about the medallion is its inscription, "Science Brings Peace and America Plenty."

Chose Wife by Her Feet.

Reading persons' characters from their feet is the method Sir Robert Baden-Powell, the chief scout, has admitted he employed in choosing his wife—"The best wife I ever had."

The secretary of a boy scouts' troop gives these examples of foot reading:

"Short steps denote a fussy, swaggering little person.

"Hurried, jerky steps, a nervous person.

"A slow slouch, a lazy man, a loafer.

"Smooth, quick steps, an intelligent, observant person."

A boy scout observed that a stolid person often walks flatfooted.

H. V. L. Ross, the walker, said: "The walker I most distrust, especially where a woman is concerned, is the one who comes down hard on the heels. I believe this is a sign of a bad-tempered person."—From the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

All Dressed Up.

"The seashore jokes about short bathing costumes are back numbers," said Cortlandt Bleecker, the society leader at a Newport ball. "All the same—"

Mr. Bleecker chuckled merrily.

"Here's a good one, all the same. Two Newport girls were jazzing in their 'maillots' the other morning on the beach. You know the 'maillo' rig—no skirt, no stockings, no sleeves, and hardly any legs. Well, the first girl said as she jazzed:

"'It's jolly to have a little dance after your bath, isn't it?'

"'Yes,' said the second girl; 'only you feel so dressed up in these maillots after last winter's ball gowns.'"

Growth of Y. W. C. A.

The present membership of the Y. W. C. A. in the United States is 359,315, an increase of approximately 300,000 in the last five years. There are 1,212 association centers in the country, 351 of them in 234 cities of more than 25,000 population, 111 in smaller communities and 750 in colleges. This is exclusive of work being carried on by the American association in eight European countries, and in India, Japan, China, South America and Honolulu.

An Important Decision.

"This celebrated novelist says he frequently sits at his typewriter all morning without being able to write a word."

"I know just how that is," said the debutante. "I once sat for two hours at my writing table before I could write the one word, 'No.'"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Charm" for Lovers.

A belief in "charms" still exists in Peakland. In the chimney of an old cottage was recently found a dried pig's heart stuck full of thorns, a relic of the belief that if a jilted lover stuck pins or thorns into a pig's heart he would cause much pain to his faithless sweetheart.—London Mail.

SCENE OF MAJESTIC BEAUTY

Table Mountain, for Many Reasons, Is Superior to Any of the Earth's Great Peaks.

I have seen many flat-topped hopjes in Africa. I have seen the bare and golden Atlas range drop away into the golden sands of Morocco, but I have never seen anything resembling its mighty mass which is the dominant, the royal fact of the Cape Peninsula. . . . It is by virtue of its mass and the colossal buttressed cliffs which form its walls that Table mountain is majestic, as also by the abruptness of its rise from the visible sea-level. The height of inland mountains is a matter of faith rather than sight; but this mountain, like Etna and the Peak of Teneriffe and others whose roots are in the sea, announces its stature at once to the eye. It rises more immediately from the sea than either of these, yet not so immediately as it appears to do when seen from the bay. It throws out toward the ocean low spurs of mingled rock and green banks. In spring these grassy banks are all set with flowers. Among them is a pretty white flower, about the size of a narcissus, though different in shape, of which I have seen a bouquet in England, many weeks after it had been gathered at the Cape, standing in a vase without water and still quite fresh. . . . —Margaret L. Woods.

NEED FOR BALANCE WHEEL

Courage Is, of Course, a Magnificent Thing, But Should Be Regulated by Prudence.

Courage is an indispensable quality in our success; but if it is not balanced and regulated by prudence it will run away with us and lead us into all sorts of foolhardy things. Boldness is a great quality when it is held in check by proper cautiousness and guided by good judgment.

I know a man whose courage is very much over-developed and his faculty of caution is very deficient. He does not know what fear means, and he plunges into all sorts of foolish operations which do not turn out well, and he is always trying to get out of things which he had gone into hastily. If his prudence had been equally developed with his courage, with his boldness, he would have made a very strong man.

Futile endeavors, half-hearted efforts never accomplish anything. It takes the fire of determination, energy, push, and good judgment to accomplish that which counts. It is the well-balanced enthusiastic man with fire in his blood, and ginger in his brain, who makes things move and achieves the seemingly impossible.—Denver Catholic Register.

The Kiss in Ancient Folklore.

A story of Alexander the Great and a kiss forms one of the most thrilling bits of history. An enemy of the king's invented a novel plot to cause Alexander's death. He discovered a beautiful young girl, who, like Rappaccini's daughter in Hawthorne's story, had been brought up on deadly poison, and every one who came near her was killed by her deadly atmosphere. She was sent to the king's palace with instructions to do what would be called "vamping" today. Alexander saw and admired her extravagantly, but the shrewd Aristotle suspected treachery. Before he allowed the girl to approach the throne he sent for a criminal who had been sentenced to death, and instructed him to kiss the girl in the presence of the king. He fell dead on the ground, like one struck by lightning.

The same story appears in folklore of India, and the early Christian monks made great use of it in their sermons, personifying the Christian as Alexander, conscience as Aristotle, sin as the venomous girl, and the weak sinner as the criminal who was executed.

Disagree Over Famous Vine.

On Roanoke Island, on the North Carolina coast, stands an ancient Scuppernong vine. It is near the grave of Virginia Dare and the site of the "Lost Colony." Nobody knows the age of that vine, but many nearby vines, which seem more youthful by comparison, actually are known to be more than one hundred years old.

A regional contribution to American mythology credits Sir Walter Raleigh with having planted the vine where it now stands, and further claims are that it is the original Scuppernong. Unimaginative investigators, however, say that the original Scuppernong grew wild in Tyrrel county, North Carolina, along the Scuppernong river, well before 1700, and that from this county the species found its way to Roanoke island.

Shoe-Throwing Old Custom.

Throwing old shoes was not always confined to weddings, though the custom nowdays has come to be associated entirely with the going away of bridal couples. Authorities differ as to the origin of the practice and its exact significance; it seems, however, as if it had to do with the transfer of property—women being regarded as such among the nations in which the custom began.

It was in the sense of confirming a sale or exchange that the Jews understood the removal and giving of a shoe or sandal. When the kinsman of Boaz consented to waive his claim upon the parcel of land which Naomi would sell, he "drew off his shoe," for "this is the custom of Israel."

CURIOSITIES OF FINNY TRIBE

Fishes Gifted With Power of Mimicry to Protect Them From Their Natural Enemies.

Two interesting examples of mimicry among fish are given by a correspondent. The first, found in Ceylon, is shaped and colored like a withered leaf. A certain naturalist, Dr. A. Willey, describes his experience of this curious fish. He was walking along the reef with a fisherman, when the latter attempted to catch a fish for him. The naturalist could not see at first what it was. The fish dodged about, and the fisherman failed to get it. Seizing the net himself, he saw what seemed to be a yellow oak-leaf gently and inertly sinking to the bottom. This being a common occurrence, he was about to turn away, when the supposed leaf righted itself, and darted off. It was finally secured, and was found to be one of those fishes commonly known as sea-bats. The second example is furnished by the very curious fishes called sea-horses. Many long, irregular filaments proceed from their bodies, and give them a striking resemblance to bunches of seaweed. When the fish anchors itself—as it frequently does—by the tail to a plant of seaweed it seems like a part of it, and is not easily detected.

FEARED TO MAKE IT WORSE

Recruit Had His Own Reasons for Not Answering Stuttering Corporal at That Moment.

He was a corporal drill instructor, and though he had an extraordinarily fine word of command, in normal speech, he stuttered—and stuttered badly.

One day a new and particularly clumsy recruit joined his squad and the instructor walked up to him to give him a little private lecture.

"Now l-l-look here, my l-l-lad," he began. "You're about the sl-sl-sloppiest thing I've ever had in my su-su-squad. You must b-b-buck up. Wha-wha-what's your name?"

There was no answer, and the corporal painfully repeated the question but there was still no answer.

Eventually the sergeant major intervened.

"What's the matter with you, my lad? Why don't you answer the corporal?" he asked.

"B-b-b-because," explained the unfortunate recruit, "I d-d-d-don't want to m-m-mock him!"

THIS A "WOMAN'S COUNTRY"

English Writer Gives an Interesting Impression of Her Sister Over the Seas.

As an English woman who went about America for nearly three years, making friends, East, West, South and North, I ought to be able to contrast the women of the two countries, but the more one travels the more one realizes that "folks is just folks" all the world over.

American women are quicker at the uptake as regards friendliness and kindnesses; but the tongue-tied English do just as much in the long run. The American's manners are more cosmopolitan, her clothes are better put on, she has more good stories in her after-dinner speeches. But if you compare corresponding types—as most travelers omit to do—they are "born the same color under their skin."

America is a woman's country. The boy belongs to his mother, and most women give their own opinions on all subjects—quite curiously well expressed—without any suggestion of having gone to a man for help.

The Englishwoman speaks more shortly and with a suggestion of having "asked her husband at home"; but I doubt if the Englishwoman is worse off, since England is the home of the proverb, "As the good man saith, so say we; but as the good wife saith so must it be."

One very noticeable charm in the American woman is her quickness in starting conversation with a stranger and her aptness in saying something pleasant at once. I cannot help thinking that if English nurseries and school rooms taught this, it would have widely international results and put more reality into the League of Nations.—Lucy H. M. Soulsby in the Woman's Supplement of the London Times.

VAST EMPIRE IN SOUTH SEAS

Extent of Australasian Group Under British Rule Is Hardly Realized by Americans.

Judson C. Welliver writes in the Country Magazine that our impressions about the Australasian empire of the future are rather vague, because we are unable to realize its mere bigness. Thus the island of New Guinea, the greatest island in the world, if we classify Australia as a continent, was, before the war, divided between the British, Dutch and Germans. The British have now taken over, in the name of Australia, the German claims.

We think of New Guinea as a considerable patch of dry land in the expanse of the southern ocean, but have difficulty realizing that if it could be laid down on the United States, one end would be at Portland, Me., the other near Omaha, and that it would blot out an area about twice the size of the German empire, and including something like a quarter of the population of these United States. It contains vastly greater resources than Germany, also about a thousand white people and 500,000 aborigines, largely cannibals. Half of it yet remains Dutch, but its predestination to be essentially British is quite obvious.

Australasia aims at leadership in the south temperate zone, on lines curiously parallel to those by which Great Britain has become leader in the North. With inexhaustible coal and iron, she is creating iron and steel and shipbuilding industries and a navy of her own. The war era has been marked by the completion of Australia's first transcontinental railroad, suggestive reminder of the beginning of our own Union Pacific.

Mt. Washington 6,293 Feet High.

Many persons believe that Mount Washington, in New Hampshire, is the highest mountain in the eastern part of the United States. Mount Washington stands 6,293 feet above sea level, according to the United States geological survey, department of the interior, but many peaks in the southern Appalachians are several hundred feet higher than New Hampshire's famous mountain. The highest mountain in the Appalachian system—the highest point in the United States east of the Rockies—is Mount Mitchell, in North Carolina, which stands at an elevation of 6,711 feet. The highest mountain in Tennessee, Mount Guyot, stands 6,636 feet above sea level.

Ivory Does Not Rust.

One cold afternoon several schoolgirls were standing on a corner waiting for a car. A man invited them to come into his office to wait for the car. They accepted. The conversation soon turned to the color of a certain girl's hair. One insisted it was red, another that it was auburn, and another that it was brown.

At the height of the discussion two children entered the office. As soon as they understood the nature of the argument, one of the youngsters exclaimed:

"Oh, shucks! Her hair ain't red. Ivory don't rust."—Indianapolis News.

Great California Industry.

Nearly a million acres are planted to the fruit trees that supply the canneries of California, according to Ellen R. Shaw in an article in the Old Colony Magazine, the organ of the Old Colony club. Statistics tell us that of the 100,000,000 acres of land in the state of California, about 900,000 are devoted to fruit trees; so it is easily conceivable that the fruit-canning industry is no small part of the general industrial activities of the "Golden State."

IDEA WOULD PLEASE DICKENS

First Free Children's Library in England to Be Opened in Old Home of Novelist.

There is to be opened soon the first free library for children in England in a building in which that lover of children, Charles Dickens, spent several eventful years of his own childhood. It is an idea so appropriate and fitting that all supporters of the scheme must wish for its success, remarks the Christian Science Monitor. The house in question is 33 Johnson street, Somers town, and the Dickens family lived here after they left Chatham, being tenants of the house for five years. From this house Dickens, the father, was taken to the Debtors' prison, the Marshalsea, an incident which afterward supplied his son with "copy" for two of his most famous books, "The Pickwick Papers" and "Little Dorrit."

Dickens is a striking example of how much can be accomplished by a case of real genius under adverse conditions, and it is he himself in "David Copperfield," who tells us what help and enlightenment he got in his wretched surroundings from the few books which made up his father's tiny library. Though small, that library was a rich treasure trove to a clever child. Don Quixote and Gil Blas—each of these masterpieces is composed of many stories—and from Fielding, Smollett, Goldsmith and Defoe, Dickens must have learned the music of words, and the grace and dignity of a tale of life well told.

If his old house now becomes the home of a free library for children who, like him, may have a chance to forget the hard facts of their lives in the works of great authors, everyone who has the welfare of children at heart, must rejoice.

GAS TO FOIL BANK ROBBERS

Contrivance Threatens to Make Trouble for That Particular Class of Society's Enemies.

Bank robbers who make a specialty of attacking vaults with explosives will do well to beware of a contrivance newly patented by Richard C. Roeschel of Harrisburg, Pa.

He proposes to provide a chemical defense for banks in the shape of an arrangement of glass tubes forming a sort of poison-gas battery. It may be made part of the gate inside a vault, or may have any other structural relation to the vaults that is deemed desirable. It may even be portable, so as to be placed in position at night, and removable in the daytime.

The tubes are designed to contain benzyl iodid, tear-gas stuff, or any other suitable chemical which, when it expands, is calculated to asphyxiate the robber or at least put him to flight. Bulbous expansions of the tubes furnish containers for the deadly material.

The robber has only to start something by setting off a charge of explosives. The concussion breaks the tubes; out flows the lethal chemical, and the business of burglary interests the nocturnal bandit no more for that occasion.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Beat Them to It.

An Irvington man planted several hills of bantam sweet corn in an isolated part of his garden to grow seed for next year. He remarked to a neighbor woman about the time that "the blackbirds and sparrows had not succeeded in finding his seed corn this year." The second morning after making this remark he found about forty blackbirds, near sunup, busily devouring his corn. He "shooed" them away and that evening pulled all the ears and put them away for safe keeping. The next morning he looked out to see whether any blackbirds were on hand. Sure enough an immense flock was sitting on the ground at the base of the now barren stalks looking at each other and around. The puzzled look on their "countenances," he says, was ludicrous in the extreme.—Indianapolis News.

Elevated to Bishopric.

Seldom has there been discovered a more clever and effective device for spreading the gospel than that arranged by wise old Bishop Amator of Armorica. He evolved a scheme which promised the linking of the church with the powerful state.

Catching Governor Germanus in church one day, the bishop slipped up behind that official. A pass with one hand and he had snipped off the gubernatorial locks; a pass with the other hand, and a bishop's robe was slipped over the tonsured dome. Before the governor could say the American equivalent for "Jack Robinson," he was informed that the Bishop Amator had resigned and that he was ordained in his stead.

French Hostess Houses Closed.

Because of the small number of visitors to the American cemeteries in France during the cold months, the hostess houses maintained by the American Red Cross and the Y. W. C. A. at Beny, Fere-en-Tardenois and Belleau woods, for the comfort of parents and friends who are visiting the graves, are closed this winter. The house near Romagne, at the Argonne, the largest of the American cemeteries will remain open. If the need is renewed in the spring the houses will open again. Hundreds of American travelers who have visited the graves have been taken care of in these small houses, the only quarters affording meals, restrooms or any traveling comforts near the cemeteries.

THIS A "WOMAN'S COUNTRY"

English Writer Gives an Interesting Impression of Her Sister Over the Seas.

As an English woman who went about America for nearly three years, making friends, East, West, South and North, I ought to be able to contrast the women of the two countries, but the more one travels the more one realizes that "folks is just folks" all the world over.

American women are quicker at the uptake as regards friendliness and kindnesses; but the tongue-tied English do just as much in the long run. The American's manners are more cosmopolitan, her clothes are better put on, she has more good stories in her after-dinner speeches. But if you compare corresponding types—as most travelers omit to do—they are "both the same color under their skin."

America is a woman's country. The boy belongs to his mother, and most women give their own opinions on all subjects—quite curiously well expressed—without any suggestion of having gone to a man for help.

The Englishwoman speaks more shortly and with a suggestion of having "asked her husband at home"; but I doubt if the Englishwoman is worse off, since England is the home of the proverb, "As the good man saith, so say we; but as the good wife saith so must it be."

One very noticeable charm in the American woman is her quickness in starting conversation with a stranger and her aptness in saying something pleasant at once. I cannot help thinking that if English nurseries and school rooms taught this, it would have widely international results and put more reality into the League of Nations.—Lucy H. M. Soulsby in the Woman's Supplement of the London Times.

VAST EMPIRE IN SOUTH SEAS

Extent of Australasian Group Under British Rule Is Hardly Realized by Americans.

Judson C. Welliver writes in the Country Magazine that our impressions about the Australasian empire of the future are rather vague, because we are unable to realize its mere bigness. Thus the island of New Guinea, the greatest island in the world, if we classify Australia as a continent, was, before the war, divided between the British, Dutch and Germans. The British have now taken over, in the name of Australia, the German claims.

We think of New Guinea as a considerable patch of dry land in the expanse of the southern ocean, but have difficulty realizing that if it could be laid down on the United States, one end would be at Portland, Me., the other near Omaha, and that it would blot out an area about twice the size of the German empire, and including something like a quarter of the population of these United States. It contains vastly greater resources than Germany, also about a thousand white people and 500,000 aborigines, largely cannibals. Half of it yet remains Dutch, but its predestination to be essentially British is quite obvious.

Australasia aims at leadership in the south temperate zone, on lines curiously parallel to those by which Great Britain has become leader in the North. With inexhaustible coal and iron, she is creating iron and steel and shipbuilding industries and a navy of her own. The war era has been marked by the completion of Australia's first transcontinental railroad, suggestive reminder of the beginning of our own Union Pacific.

Mt. Washington 6,293 Feet High.

Many persons believe that Mount Washington, in New Hampshire, is the highest mountain in the eastern part of the United States. Mount Washington stands 6,293 feet above sea level, according to the United States geological survey, department of the interior, but many peaks in the southern Appalachians are several hundred feet higher than New Hampshire's famous mountain. The highest mountain in the Appalachian system—the highest point in the United States east of the Rockies—is Mount Mitchell, in North Carolina, which stands at an elevation of 6,711 feet. The highest mountain in Tennessee, Mount Guyot, stands 6,636 feet above sea level.

Ivory Does Not Rust.

One cold afternoon several schoolgirls were standing on a corner waiting for a car. A man invited them to come into his office to wait for the car. They accepted. The conversation soon turned to the color of a certain girl's hair. One insisted it was red, another that it was auburn, and another that it was brown.

At the height of the discussion two children entered the office. As soon as they understood the nature of the argument, one of the youngsters exclaimed:

"Oh, shucks! Her hair ain't red. Ivory don't rust."—Indianapolis News.

Great California Industry.

Nearly a million acres are planted to the fruit trees that supply the canneries of California, according to Elton R. Shaw in an article in the Old Colony Magazine, the organ of the Old Colony club. Statistics tell us that of the 100,000,000 acres of land in the state of California, about 900,000 are devoted to fruit trees; so it is easily conceivable that the fruit-canning industry is no small part of the general industrial activities of the "Golden State."

IDEA WOULD PLEASE DICKENS

First Free Children's Library in England to Be Opened in Old Home of Novelist.

There is to be opened soon the first free library for children in England in a building in which that lover of children, Charles Dickens, spent several eventful years of his own childhood. It is an idea so appropriate and fitting that all supporters of the scheme must wish for its success, remarks the Christian Science Monitor. The house in question is 33 Johnson street, Somers town, and the Dickens family lived here after they left Chatham, being tenants of the house for five years. From this house Dickens, the father, was taken to the Debtors' prison, the Marshalsea, an incident which afterward supplied his son with "copy" for two of his most famous books, "The Pickwick Papers" and "Little Dorrit."

Dickens is a striking example of how much can be accomplished by a case of real genius under adverse conditions, and it is he himself in "David Copperfield," who tells us what help and enlightenment he got in his wretched surroundings from the few books which made up his father's tiny library. Though small, that library was a rich treasure trove to a clever child. Don Quixote and Gil Blas—each of these masterpieces is composed of many stories—and from Fielding, Smollett, Goldsmith and Defoe, Dickens must have learned the music of words, and the grace and dignity of a tale of life well told.

If his old house now becomes the home of a free library for children who, like him, may have a chance to forget the hard facts of their lives in the works of great authors, everyone who has the welfare of children at heart, must rejoice.

GAS TO FOIL BANK ROBBERS

Contrivance Threatens to Make Trouble for That Particular Class of Society's Enemies.

Bank robbers who make a specialty of attacking vaults with explosives will do well to beware of a contrivance newly patented by Richard C. Roeschel of Harrisburg, Pa.

He proposes to provide a chemical defense for banks in the shape of an arrangement of glass tubes forming a sort of poison-gas battery. It may be made part of the gate inside a vault, or may have any other structural relation to the vaults that is deemed desirable. It may even be portable, so as to be placed in position at night, and removable in the daytime.

The tubes are designed to contain benzyl iodid, tear-gas stuff, or any other suitable chemical which, when it expands, is calculated to asphyxiate the robber or at least put him to flight. Bulbous expansions of the tubes furnish containers for the deadly material.

The robber has only to start something by setting off a charge of explosives. The concussion breaks the tubes; out flows the lethal chemical, and the business of burglary interests the nocturnal bandit no more for that occasion.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

He remarked to a neighbor woman about the time that "the blackbirds and sparrows had not succeeded in finding his seed corn this year." The puzzled look on their "countenances," he says, was ludicrous in the extreme.—Indianapolis News.

Latin Words in Our Language.

The Norman-French people who settled England gave to English speaking people several thousand words with a few alterations. Then at the Revival of Learning a still larger number of Latin words came into our language. The Latin word facilis became facile; the word ratio appeared as reason, the word oculo as eyeball; the word Regimina as separate, and so on [illegible] thousands of other words. And since that time, new Latin words have been coming yearly into our language and settling there.—From "The Art of Writing English."

BY DOUGLAS MALLOCH

DOWN GRADE.

YES, boy, I know—you do not think;
You only hear the glasses clink
And feel the bogus joy of drink.

Life looks all summer through a glass;
The whisky road is green with grass—
But life and summer both will pass.

It's easy now to drink or not,
To drink a little or a lot;
But after all your drinking, what?

May it not happen ere the grave
The thing you laugh at you will crave?—
The master will become the slave?

God! I have seen them: Boys like you,
The frolickers of fighting crew,
Who never thought and never knew.

Who took the road that dips and gleams,
That runs ahead of singing streams
(Yet somehow never downward seems).

With this same foolish passion played,
The same old merry journey made,
Who took the road of easy grade—

Till night came on, till sank the sun,
Till shadows gathered one by one
Around the path, and day was done.

'Twas then they turned; but now the hill
Was high behind them, and the rill
Within the valley dark and still—

Around, the level of the plain;
Above, a rocky path of pain
To climb, if they would rise again

I am no preacher called to preach;
I am no teacher fit to teach
You younger men of better speech.

Yet I have walked the merry road
Where laughing rivers downward flowed,
And climbed again with all the load.

With all the load a man acquires
Who follows after his desires
Until he finds his lusts are liars,

Until he finds, as find he will,
The peace, the joy his age to fill
He left behind him on the hill.

My preaching is not perfect, Jack;
Yet truth, at least, it does not lack—
For I have been there boy, and back.

A Successor.

No, Tom Sawyer is not dead. Or at least he has a worthy successor in eight-year-old Joseph McKee, one of whose duties is to keep the home lawn clean.

Several of the children in his neighborhood had been anxious to have a Halloween party, and Joseph's mother told him that he might have one "You can have them mask and we'll have jack-o'-lanterns and witches, and dance and—" she began.

But Joseph interrupted her. "Mother," he spoke earnestly, "I'd rather have a wiener roast. They can rake up all the leaves on the lawn and the trash in the garden and burn them in a bonfire and roast wieners. They'd be helping me while they had fun, too."—Indianapolis News.

Joke Over Food Scarcity.

Food is still scarce in Hanover, Germany. The food administration of Klausthal, Harz, announced recently that herrings were on sale at the municipal food distributing station and that the share of each person was one half of a herring. That situation was reflected in these advertisements in the Klausthaler Anzeiger. "Single person wants a partner to obtain a herring. Address 'Ehrliche Teilung (Honest Division), business office of this paper, and state whether head or tail part." "Young blond girl wants to make the acquaintance of a refined gentleman as a herring partner. Subsequent marriage not excluded. Address 'Liebesgott Hering' (God of Love Herring), business office of this paper."

Origin of Word "Doll" Obscure.

The origin of the word "doll" is obscure, but the common explanation frequently given that the word is an abbreviation of "idoll" or "idol," is said by the best authorities to be certainly wrong. It is thought probable that the word is derived from Doll, or Dolly, diminutives of the woman's name, "Dorothy," which in Greek signifies the gift of God; hence the idea of a gift to a child for a plaything.

GREEN BAY SUFFERS ACUTE HOME SHORTAGE

Green Bay, Wis., Jan. 27—This city in common with many other cities in the country is suffering from a shortage of buildings suitable for residence and business purposes. Figures obtained from the Association of Commerce report this city short 800 homes. If it were possible to obtain their erection, 1000 buildings could be utilized, officials say.

During 1920 which was the most favorable year since 1916, 113 homes were built. Officials of the Association of Commerce stated that at least 200 homes should have been built for the people of Green Bay, to care for the increase in population.

The outlying districts show the largest building. It is estimated that 9,000 persons earn their livelihood in the city who reside in these districts. The natural increase in the population of the city proper is 500 a year thru births alone.

MINERS MUST ANSWER CHARGES OF MURDER

(By Associated Press)

Williamson, W. V., Jan. 27—Twenty-four men from the little mining town of Matewa, were called here to answer a charge of murder in Mingo County Circuit Court. They were indicted last July for the part they were alleged to have taken in the battle with private detectives, who had ejected former employes of the South Mountain Company from the corporation. In the fight seven men were killed.

The defendants included the chief of police at Matewa, several other persons. A. Hafe, a detective in the battle is looked upon as an important witness in the case.

The peace, the joy his age to fill
He left behind him on the hill.

My preaching is not perfect, Jack;
Yet truth, at least, it does not lack—
For I have been there boy, and back.

Mrs. Joe Benner of Rudolph was a pleasant caller at this office on Thursday while in the city shopping.

A Successor.

No, Tom Sawyer is not dead. Or at least he has a worthy successor in eight-year-old Joseph McKee, one of whose duties is to keep the home lawn clean.

Several of the children in his neighborhood had been anxious to have a Halloween party, and Joseph's mother told him that he might have one. "You can have them mask and we'll have jack-o'-lanterns and witches, and dance and—" she began.

But Joseph interrupted her. "Mother," he spoke earnestly, "I'd rather have a' wiener roast. They can rake up all the leaves on the lawn and the trash in the garden and burn them in a bonfire and roast wieners. They'd be helping me while they had fun, too."—Indianapolis News.

Joke Over Food Scarcity.

Food is still scarce in Hanover, Germany. The food administration of Klausthal, Harz, announced recently that herrings were on sale at the municipal food distributing station and that the share of each person was one half of a herring. That situation was reflected in these advertisements in the Klausthaler Anzeiger. "Single person wants a partner to obtain a herring. Address 'Ehrliche Teilung' (Honest Division), business office of this paper, and state whether head or tail part." "Young blond girl wants to make the acquaintance of a refined gentleman as a herring partner. Subsequent marriage not excluded. Address 'Liebesgott Hering' (God of Love Herring), business office of this paper."

Origin of Word "Doll" Obscure.

The origin of the word "doll" is obscure, but the common explanation frequently given that the word is an abbreviation of "idoll" or "idol," is said by the best authorities to be certainly wrong. It is thought probable that the word is derived from Doll, or Dolly, diminutives of the woman's name, "Dorothy," which in Greek signifies the gift of God; hence the idea of a gift to a child for a plaything.

GREEN BAY SUFFERS ACUTE HOME SHORTAGE

Green Bay, Wis., Jan. 27—This city in common with many other cities in the country is suffering from a shortage of buildings suitable for residence and business purposes. Figures obtained from the Association of Commerce report this city short 800 homes. If it were possible to obtain their erection, 1000 buildings could be utilized, officials say.

During 1920 which was the most favorable year since 1916, 113 homes were built. Officials of the Association of Commerce stated that at least 200 homes should have been built for the people of Green Bay, to care for the increase in population.

The outlying districts show the largest building. It is estimated that 9,000 persons earn their livelihood in the city who reside in these districts. The natural increase in the population of the city proper is 500 a year thru births alone.

In the fight seven men were killed.

The defendants included the chief of police at Matewa, several other persons. A. Hafe, a detective in the battle is looked upon as an important witness in the case.

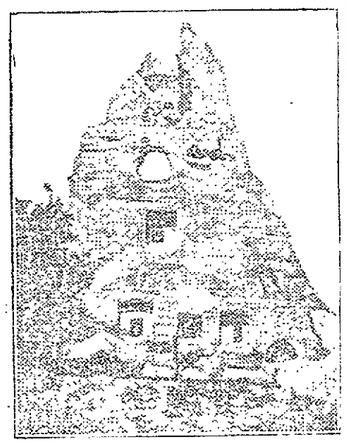
NEITHER WARS NOR RENTS DISTURB THIS CURIOUS PEOPLE

The cone dwellers of Asia Minor, technically known as the Troglodytes of Cappadocia, are harassed not at all by the housing problem, for they live in nature-made apartment houses, fashioned by trickling streams and volcanic violence.

Nor is it likely that they are concerned in the least about their political fate, for, though they inhabit what is characterized as the "cradle of civilization," they are more primitive in some particulars than the most benighted tribes of Africa or the South Pacific.

A communication by J. R. Sitlington Sterrett to the National Geographic society describes the Cappadocians as follows:

"Residing within a stone's throw, metaphorically speaking, of the wonderful civilization which flourished on the banks of the Nile 6,000 years ago; of the mighty kingdoms of Assyria and



Five-Story Cone Dwelling.

Babylonia which arose in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris, their power and splendor dazzling the world 2,000 years before the Christian era; and at the very threshold of ancient Greece, with its unrivaled culture and political advancement, the Troglodytes of Cappadocia still retain toward their fellow men an attitude of mind akin to that which obtained in the Stone age, when there was no such thing as human society, but every man was his own law and the mortal enemy of his neighbor.

"The caves, cones and cliff dwellings of the Cappadocian Troglodytes of both ancient and modern times are to be found in greatest number in the shadow of Asia Minor's loftiest peak, snow-clad Mt. Argaeus (called by the Turks, Erjias Dagh), an extinct volcano whose eruption in the dim past laid the foundations and supplied the material for these remarkable habitations, while the Halys river of the ancients (now known as Kizil Irmak) in succeeding centuries became their tireless architect.

"The practice of living in caves, in cliffs or in excavated cavities in the ocean plain is to be traced to a state of society which we of today have some difficulty in depicting to ourselves. And yet the central thought of the Troglodytic habit is the basic principle upon which ancient civilization was founded.

"They have sought and found for themselves complete isolation. They seem to have none of the instincts of agricultural man and they are wholly unsociable.

"The entrances to their dwellings are high up in the almost perpendicular walls of the cliffs, and they are reached solely by means of long poles, which are light enough to be drawn up when the lord of the den and his family are safely housed. And when housed they really are safe from intrusion, for it would require a host to force an entrance against the will of the family.

"One ancient writer tells us that some Troglodytes made a practice of killing all those who were not in first-class physical condition, on the ground that a man who cannot earn his own living has no right to live; and when one sees those dwellings, one can imagine still another reason for killing off the aged and the infirm—because of their inability to get in or out of the house."

THE TEMPLE CITIES OF JAPAN

Many feet have been treading their way to the shrines in the temple cities of Japan in recent months.

In the temples of Tokyo many bits of American pocket money went to a priest for writing a pretty prayer on a slip of paper, which the visitor, in true pilgrim fashion, pressed to his forehead and to his breast and then fastened to the temple wall in order that it might be a perpetual petition. There are 30,000 deities to whom devout Japanese write, so a few Americans' pleas scarcely clogged the celestial postal service.

There were many native pilgrims on the way to the shrines. During the summer months when the crops have been taken care of, the village folk, though they have the temples of their own patron deity and the fox god, feel that they must send out a pilgrim or two to the sacred mountains and holy places of Japan to worship in behalf of those who cannot go, and so they provide a fund for his expenses.

Nor does the emissary travel in state. Life for him loses most of its amenities. He is equipped with a cheap white cotton shirt that can be easily washed, tight-fitting trousers and a loose white cotton jacket which he tucks in with a girdle. He wears an enormous broad, stiff straw hat, and on his back he carries a piece of matting which serves him as an umbrella by day and as a bed by night. He carries his luggage in two bundles, one on his back and the other in front, usually labeled with the name of the shrine he is to visit, and somewhere about his person there is hung a little bell which tinkles as he stumps along over the weary road from mountain to mountain.

In August the pilgrim rolls off his mat and the visitor from foreign lands climbs out of bed at the crack of dawn to hear the lotus flower bloom, for the buds burst with a pleasing characteristic sound.

If Nikko is the most beautiful city in Japan, Kyoto can be called the most interesting. Here the feminine visitor finds herself bewildered by the most exquisitely wrought of all the exquisite pottery, cloisonne, bronzes, fans and velvets. After she has bought more than she can comfortably get home with, she probably will want to see a bit of the mikado's palace which covers over twenty-five acres of ground and is surrounded by a great wall with six gates, or journey out to see the largest lake in Japan, Lake Biwa, and the 1,200-year-old pine tree which stands near it.

HOW SUGAR MADE CUBA A WORLD EL DORADO

Sugar, like shoes, we once took for granted. But procuring enough for the preserving season was a problem and sugar "speak easies" are still not uncommon in lands where the supply is rationed.

Writing to the National Geographic society, William Joseph Showalter says:

"With a sugar production nearly doubled and prices more than quadrupled since 1912, one can readily see why Cuba is the world's El Dorado of 1920, and why sugar is its king.

"The imagination is almost overpowered in attempting to comprehend the vast proportions of the sugar industry of the island as it exists this year.

"The cane produced is of such tremendous volume that a procession of bull teams four abreast, reaching around the earth, would be required to move it. The crop would suffice to build a solid wall around the entire two thousand miles of the island's coast line as high as an ordinary dwelling house and thick enough for a file of four men to walk abreast on it.

"The sugar extracted from this cane would load a fleet of steamers reaching from Havana to New York, with a ship for every mile of the twelve hundred that stretch between the two ports. The great pyramid of Cheops, before whose awe-inspiring proportions millions of people have stood and gazed in open-mouthed amazement, remains, after five thousand years, unrivaled as a monumental pile; but Cuba's sugar output this year would make two pyramids, each outbasing and overtopping Cheops.

"The wealth the outgoing sugar crop brings in is not less remarkable in its proportions. Four hundred dollars out of a single crop for every human being who lives on the island—a sum almost as great as the per capita wealth produced by all the farms, all the factories, and all the mines of the United States.

"What wonder, then, that Cuba today is a land of gold and gems, richer than Midas ever was, converting Croesus, by contrast, into a beggar?

"How much net profit the cane grower reaps at 1920 prices is hard to estimate, but that it is large will appear when the methods of cane growing are stated. To begin with, after the first crop the planter does not have to bother with seed time for about ten years. The soil is so deep and so fertile that one planting produces ten harvests. Neither does cultivation bother him after the first season, for the blades stripped from one crop form a mulch that keeps the weeds from competing with the next one."

BIRDS HAVE YANKEE ACCENT

Londoners Complain That Imported Parrots Are Spoiling the Pronunciation of Their Fellows.

The American accent has invaded even the parrot house at the zoological gardens here, according to a London correspondent of the Detroit News.

A large consignment of birds has arrived from America. Many have names that suggest cocktails. Hitherto scientists may have doubted the ability of cockatoos to acquire a recognizable accent, but two of these birds fresh from the New York zoo speak unmistakable American.

They ask repeatedly for "clam oysters on a half shell" and beg their amused visitors for hominy or California peanuts. Sometimes in an outburst of patriotism they repeat "California" until it would appear that it is the only word in their vocabulary. And now a very small green parrot in the cage next door is trying to say "California," too.

A disgusted keeper stands outside his cage saying "London, London, London," but the small green parrot does not seem to admire his accent so much as that of his feathered transatlantic friends.

The man who reads the Tribune is informed.

Of course, I read it in the Tribune.

MEN OF IMMORTAL MEMORY

Many of the Works of the Greek Philosophers, Plato and Aristotle, Are Still Preserved.

Plato (427-347 B. C.), the celebrated Greek philosopher, taught that the true source of knowledge is the reason, observes an exchange. According to his teaching, we come to consciousness through innate ideas developed by contact with the outer world through senses. He distinguished between empirical knowledge and reason, and divided philosophy into logic, metaphysics and morals. He was the first to attempt the construction of philosophic language; to develop an abstract idea of knowledge and science; to state logically the properties of matter, form, substance, accident, cause and effect, reality and appearance; to describe the divinity as a being essentially good, and tell of his moral attributes. He taught that matter is an eternal and infinite principle; that God is the supreme intelligence, incorporeal, without beginning, end or change, and that the soul of man is immortal. Aristotle (384-322 B. C.), another celebrated Greek philosopher, was the pupil of Plato and the teacher of Alexander the Great. He makes logic the instrument by which all general knowledge is obtained. He enlarged the limits of philosophy to include all sciences except history. He taught that nature is a machine, active through deity or a first cause.

TRAGRESSOR ON TRAIL BACK TO THE MINORS

Walter Tragressor, former Wisconsin Rapids baseball star, who played on the locals lots back in '11 and '12, but who later hit the majors and was kept for several years by the Philadelphia Nationals, has started back for the minors and has been traded to the International League of Buffalo. In addition to his catching ability "Treg" became famous here for his ability as a pool player as well as a base ball player and was well known among the local fans.

"How much net profit the cane grower reaps at 1920 prices is hard to estimate, but that it is large will appear when the methods of cane growing are stated. To begin with, after the first crop the planter does not have to bother with seed time for about ten years. The soil is so deep and so fertile that one planting produces ten harvests. Neither does cultivation bother him after the first season, for the blades stripped from one crop form a mulch that keeps the weeds from competing with the next one."

BIRDS HAVE YANKEE ACCENT

Londoners Complain That Imported Parrots Are Spoiling the Pronunciation of Their Fellows.

The American accent has invaded even the parrot house at the zoological gardens here, according to a London correspondent of the Detroit News.

A large consignment of birds has arrived from America. Many have names that suggest cocktails. Hitherto scientists may have doubted the ability of cockatoos to acquire a recognizable accent, but two of these birds fresh from the New York zoo speak unmistakable American.

They ask repeatedly for "clam oysters on a half shell" and beg their amused visitors for hominy or California peanuts. Sometimes in an outburst of patriotism they repeat "California" until it would appear that it is the only word in their vocabulary. And now a very small green parrot in the cage next door is trying to say "California," too.

A disgusted keeper stands outside his cage saying "London, London, London," but the small green parrot does not seem to admire his accent so much as that of his feathered transatlantic friends.

The man who reads the Tribune is informed.

Of course, I read it in the Tribune.

MEN OF IMMORTAL MEMORY

Many of the Works of the Greek Philosophers, Plato and Aristotle, Are Still Preserved.

Plato (427-347 B. C.), the celebrated Greek philosopher, taught that the true source of knowledge is the reason, observes an exchange. According to his teaching, we come to consciousness through innate ideas developed by contact with the outer world through senses. He distinguished between empirical knowledge and reason, and divided philosophy into logic, metaphysics and morals. He was the first to attempt the construction of philosophic language; to develop an abstract idea of knowledge and science; to state logically the properties of matter, form, substance, accident, cause and effect, reality and appearance; to describe the divinity as a being essentially good, and tell of his moral attributes. He taught that matter is an eternal and infinite principle; that God is the supreme intelligence, incorporeal, without beginning, end or change, and that the soul of man is immortal. Aristotle (384-322 B. C.), another celebrated Greek philosopher, was the pupil of Plato and the teacher of Alexander the Great. He makes logic the instrument by which all general knowledge is obtained. He enlarged the limits of philosophy to include all sciences except history. He taught that nature is a machine, active through deity or a first cause.

TRAGRESSOR ON TRAIL BACK TO THE MINORS

Walter Tragressor, former Wisconsin Rapids baseball star, who played on the locals lots back in '11 and '12, but who later hit the majors and was kept for several years by the Philadelphia Nationals, has started back for the minors and has been traded to the International League of Buffalo. In addition to his catching ability "Treg" became famous here for his ability as a pool player as well as a base ball player and was well known among the local fans.

AGENT BOOSTS COUNTY ASSN. OF BREEDERS

PETERSON ACTIVE TO MAKE HIGH GRADE CATTLE MEN STIMULATE ORGANIZATIONS WITH MEETINGS

—Big Bargains $ Day—

The steady growth of the pure breed cattle industry in Wood County has been influenced more than a little by the activities of the several breed associations in the county. In spite of their effectiveness, however, a decided handicap has always been in evidence in connection with the County Breed Associations in that only a limited number of meetings were held each year, and that at these meetings even though the roads and weather conditions were favorable at the time of the meeting, it was never possible to get out the total membership. Whatever of plans were outlined at these annual or semi-annual meetings relative to a working program never carried thru in a one hundred per cent manner so far as the county was concerned, since many of the members were working more or less single-handed in their respective communities.

Plans Definite Program

Under a new plan that is being put into being in Wood County thru the efforts of County Agent R. A Peterson, the different associations will be equipped with legs so that with the definite program that is outlined for 1921, the Associations should walk steadily forward.

The new plan allows for the organization of local associations in various sections of the county. Two officers are elected to each of these local associations, a president and a secretary-treasurer, and these officers when the plan is fully developed will become the board of directors of the County Association. The officers of the County Association will in turn be elected from the board of directors. When a breeder becomes a member of a local association, he also becomes a member of the Co. Association. Dues will be paid to the Secy-Treas. of the local association One-half of the sum paid in will remain with the local association and the balance will go into the treasury of the County Association. That the membership of the County Association will be greatly increased is evidenced by the fact that in one of the local associations already organized—of the ten members, only one was a member of the County Association.

Talks Calf Clubs

A definite program will be developed with each local association for the coming year with the co-operation of County Agent Peterson. The projects will be outlined to fit the respective communities and will be encouraged to reach definite results within the year. Such practical projects as More pure-bred sires, Calf Clubs, Official Testing and Cow Testing Associations, will be worked into the development program.

Three local associations have already been developed in the County and others will be organized shortly. Co. Agent Peterson is getting the results at the Farmers' Institute meetings that have been held at Nasonville, Richfield and Pittsville. The officers elected were as follows:

Nasonville—Otto Peterson, president; Ed Ingle, secretary-treas.

Richfield—G. A. Plank, president; L S Marsh, secretary-treas.

Pittsville—A. E. Hoover, president; F. H. Meyer, secretary-treas.

Wants More Breeders

All of the associations so far developed have been of the Holstein Breeders. Not enough of the breeders of other breeds of cattle were present at the Institutes to warrant the organization. It is hoped, however, that both Guernsey, Jersey, and the Brown Swiss breeders can be brot together also. Enough of results should be forthcoming this season to assert itself in the showing of cattle from these different communities at the Central Wis. State Fair next Fall. The Calf Clubs of the County should also be in evidence at this time. And thru it all will run the slogan of "More and Better Cattle for Wood County."

FILM MEN PLAN BLUE LAW TEST

THREATEN LEGAL BATTLE IF EAU CLAIRE CITY OFFICIALS TRY TO PUT LAWS IN FORCE

That the Wisconsin Exhibitors' association will fight Sunday blue laws was indicated at its mid-winter conference, when Louis Nahin, Milwaukee, reported that the legislative committee would recommend employment of legal assistance to test the validity of the law should city officials of Eau Claire, Wis., enforce it.

Schools, churches and social centers that show motion pictures would be required to observe all fire regulations if a bill ordered introduced at the legislature becomes a law.

Fire Danger Alleged

Fred C. Seegert, Milwaukee, charged that social centers, churches and schools here were showing films in halls that were not fireproof and not equipped with fire escapes; that open film boxes were sometimes placed close to electric wires, and that performances were held on other than ground floors. He said the matter had been reported to the city building inspector and that he had "passed the buck" to the city attorney, who so far had done nothing.

Club Shows Menace Movies

F. J. McWilliams, Madison, told the association that the greatest menace to the motion picture industry was the showing of commercial films by churches, social centers and schools, instead of limiting their exhibitions to educational films.

Higher Taxes Opposed

The association passed a resolution opposing the plan to double the admission and film tax, and Wisconsin congressmen will be urged to fight the proposed bill.

Many of the film men reported that benefit performances for the Herbert Hoover fund for starving children of central Europe had either been held or will be held soon. The benefit in Milwaukee will be held Feb. 5.

MILL TEAM HAS GREAT RECORD

GREEN BAY SQUAD WHICH PLAYS HERE SATURDAY NIGHT BACKED BY LONG STRING OF VICTORIES

The Northern Paper Mills team of Green Bay, who play the Tri-City basket ball team at the Roller Rink Saturday night, come here with a long string of victories to their credit and the local squad are practicing for what they expect will be one of the hardest games of the season. The game Saturday night will be preceded by a game between the Consolidated basket ball team of this city and the Interlake team of Appleton. The opening game will start at 7:50 while the main game between the Tri-City team and the Green Bay bunch starts at 9:15. The game is started late in order to give the fans a chance to get their shopping done and give the employes of the stores a chance to get to the game.

Have Trimmed Many

The Northern Paper Mills are champions of the Industrial League of Wisconsin but have not limited their efforts to this league, and have gone out and trimmed practically every other team in the state. The Industrial League includes some of the state's best teams, however. Among others who have been victims of their attacks are Horlicks of Racine, New London Edisons, Beloit Fairies, Milwaukee All-Stars, Two Rivers, Ruepings of Fond du Lac, La-Crosse and Oshkosh. The latter team is headed by Bill Chandler, former University of Wisconsin star while the other teams are playing the class A basketball that is being played in the state this year.

Team Is In Shape

The local squad is in shape for the big battle and promise to give the visitors something in the way of a real game. Stark and Ritchay will be at forwards, Plahmer at center and Hill and Normington at guards. The old wrecking squad are anticipating a fast game and are out to show the visitors that the local team is the best in the state.

SAY MORRISSEY WILL LAND APPOINTMENT

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28—J. D. Morrissey, of Superior, will be selected to succeed M. F. Blumenfeld as superintendent of public property, according to authoritative, altho unofficial, statement in the capitol. His name has not been sent to the senate for confirmation but will be within the next week it was said.

Mr. Morrissey was formerly identified with the Great Northern railroad as purchasing agent at Superior. He will be selected by the governor, it is said, because of his business experience.

The appointment of J. Q. Emery as dairy and food commissioner has not yet been brought before the senate for confirmation. There has been talk of opposition to his appointment among the senators. His friends have been active in the lobby during the past two days. It is expected that he will be confirmed in the appointment, probably after a discussion.

MARSHFIELD WANTS NEW MARKET SQUARE

Deciding that it is imperative that they have a market square to hold the large rural trade which they have developed the Chamber of Commerce of Marshfield has started a petition which will be presented to the city council asking that this be provided for the city. The present idea which meets with favor among the business men is to put the market square on the main street but in case this would be too expensive they suggest some centrally located place. The Chamber is also active in that city to get an air landing field and a committee will investigate the matter of renting or leasing a level tract near the city.

SAY MORRISSEY WILL LAND APPOINTMENT

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28.—J. D. Morrissey, of Superior, will be selected to succeed M. F. Blumenfeld as superintendent of public property, according to authoritative, altho unofficial, statement in the capitol. His name has not been sent to the senate for confirmation but will be within the next week it was said.

Mr. Morrissey was formerly identified with the Great Northern railroad as purchasing agent at Superior. He will be selected by the governor, it is said, because of his business experience.

The appointment of J. Q. Emery as dairy and food commissioner has not yet been brought before the senate for confirmation. There has been talk of opposition to his appointment among the senators. His friends have been active in the lobby during the past two days. It is expected that he will be confirmed in the appointment, probably after a discussion.

MARSHFIELD WANTS NEW MARKET SQUARE

Deciding that it is imperative that they have a market square to hold the large rural trade which they have developed the Chamber of Commerce of Marshfield has started a petition which will be presented to the city council asking that this be provided for the city. The present idea which meets with favor among the business men is to put the market square on the main street but in case this would be too expensive they suggest some centrally located place. The Chamber is also active in that city to get an air landing field and a committee will investigate the matter of renting or leasing a level tract near the city.

NEKOOSA

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rohr entertained the members of the High School and graded school faculties at their home Thursday evening at a four course, six-thirty dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Sherman, who will leave soon for Milwaukee. The home was prettily decorated with jonquils and yellow candles. After dinner some time was spent in playing "500" after which a musical program was rendered. The remainder of the evening was spent in social converse.

Mrs. O. D. Billings was hostess to the members of the "500" club and a number of guests at her home last evening. After a number of games of "500" were played, Mrs. L. Koehn was awarded the club prize and Mrs. F. J. Scheibe the guest prize. At a late hour dainty refreshments were served.

The members of the R. N. A. met at their hall Wednesday evening and a number of candidates were initiated into the mysteries of the order, after which very dainty refreshments were served. Mesdames Geo. Scott and Geo. Hinckley of Port Edwards were guests of the camp.

Under the auspices of the Nekoosa Schools, "Tom Thumb's Honeymoon", will be presented tomorrow evening at the auditorium at 8 o'clock. There will be about fifty fairies, elves and other characters represented. A part of the proceeds will go toward the paying of the stage scenery.

The Nekoosa friends of Louis Brokheiser of Brokaw will be grieved to learn of his death at the family home Tuesday. He died of tumor of the brain. His funeral took place at Wausau yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Masons of that city. He leaves his wife and three children. Mrs. Brokheiser was formerly Miss Selma Arnold of Nekoosa. Tony and John Arnold, brothers of the deceased, attended the funeral.

Mr. Taylor of Oshkosh has been engaged as manual training teacher in the High School. He will arrive here tomorrow to assume his duties.

Miss Emma Bates of Port Edwards spent Wednesday with friends here.

J. L. Marvin of Wisconsin Rapids spent yesterday at the home of A. U. Marvin and family.

Mrs. E. C. Kellogg was a shopper at Wisconsin Rapids yesterday.

Mrs. H. F. Madden and Mrs. Harry Deyo of Port Edwards were guests Thursday of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Youngchild.

Nekoosa friends of Mrs. Ethel Kruger of Madison will be interested to learn that she is employed in one of the elite ready-to-wear parlors at Madison.

TALK FERRY BETWEEN BRITAIN AND SWEDEN

London, Jan. 28—A plan for linking up Sweden with England by means of a train ferry to cost £10,000,000 is being considered by business men of the two nations.

The scheme aims at the establishment of a daily service by at least six 13,000-ton ships of 18 knots speed, each capable of carrying 50 railroad cars. As the gauges of the British and Swedish railroads are the same, rapidity of transportation would be assured.

The Swedish government is understood to be willing to guarantee a 10 percent return over a given number of years, if Britain will guarantee the capital necessary for the initial outlay.

The route suggested runs from Hull to Gothenburg and there is also a suggestion of an extension across the Baltic, so as to provide direct communication between Hull and Petrograd.

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 28—The changes which have taken place in the demands of seamen as compared to the times when "salt horse" was the chief food in the forecastle, are shown by a new set of requests just formulated by the Federated Seamen's Union. They ask that their menu should include canned fruits, condensed milk, Worcestershire and tomato sauces, rolls and scones, bacon and eggs, boiled eggs, steak and onions, soup, Irish stew, roast beef, mutton, veal, assorted salads, cakes, plum pudding with sauce, custards, jellies. "Salt horse" was not on the list. Enamelled utensils, clean tablecloths three times a week are insisted upon.

IMMIGRANTS IN TEARS AT DOCKS TO REACH U. S.

STRINGENT RULINGS AND CLOSE EXAMINATIONS BREAK UP FAMILIES AND PRESENT PITIFUL SCENES

Bremen, Germany, Jan. 28—Hundreds of emigrants who come to Bremen, Hamburg and Danzig to seek new homes in America are rejected before they can embark for what to them is the land of plenty and promise. Tragic scenes are numerous when the ships physicians announce the list of those barred because of signs of disease or disability which would prevent their admission to the United States.

Reject One-Sixth

One hundred home-seekers were rejected out of 600 who attempted to leave Bremen on one steamer recently. All these unfortunates were not defective but the rejection of one member of a family in many cases prevented the entire group from sailing for America.

The most pitiful of the tragedies occur in the breaking up of family groups when some children old enough to travel alone are allowed to proceed to America, while others are detained. Weeping mothers among the hundred rejected the other day tried to kiss the hands of the physicians in an effort to get them to alter their diagnoses while scared groups of bundle-laden emigrants stood by in terror lest some technicality might also keep them off the steamer train for Bremerhaven.

Bar Polish Woman

One Polish woman, the widow of an army surgeon and her 16-year old son had been rejected at Danzig when the steamer had touched there because the boy had conjunctivtis. The woman came with her son by train to Bremen and pleaded for another examination here, but the physicians adhered to their original diagnosis and the woman was compelled to remain with her son. In several cases one child in a family of five or six showed traces of trachoma or conjunctivitis. This was sufficient to halt the whole family or to break up the family group, some of the members of which might go to America while others could not.

The refugees who flock into Danzig are generally in a wretched state when they arrive from the devastated parts of Poland and the Baltic states. Their accommodations there are old and unsanitary Political cross-currents and divided authority keeping shipping in Danzig in a constant state of uncertainty, with the result that emigrants can not get proper attention.

Travel Expense High

Steerage passage from German ports to America this winter have been exactly three times the rate charged before the war, or the equivalent of $110 while a second-class passage has cost $220.

In spite of the increased expense of trans-Atlantic travel, every steamer leaving for America has every berth taken and reservations are booked for months in advance. It is expected here that this situation may be relieved by the gradually increasing number of ships entering the German-American service and possibly, by immigration legislation now pending in the United States Congress.

WOULD RETIRE AGED STATE EMPLOYEES

Madison, Wis. Jan. 28—A retirement fund to provide for aged state employes is to be proposed by Senator George B. Sogmo in a bill which he will introduce in the senate. The ultimate effort of the proposal would in effect, be to establish a state pension system.

Under provision of the bill, women employes who reach the age of 60 and men employes who are 65 years or age would be compelled to retire on a salary which, at the maximum, would amount to $725. University and normal school professors and appointive state officers would be exempt from application of the proposed statute.

Employes who have been in the service of the state for 15 years and who had become totally disabled would be privileged to retired in the maximum salary.

The retirement fund would be created from a two and one half cent levy on the salaries of state employes. A small appropriation of $80,000 annually would be appropriated by the legislature for the first two years.

It is estimated that after twelve years of operation the burden of the state would be increased.

John Martin of Sioux City, Ia., and Geo. Martin of South Wayne, are visiting their niece, Mrs. Severe Primeau, 12th St. From here they will go to Arpin to visit their sister, who they have not seen for twenty years.

BRITISH AND FRENCH CAN'T REACH DECISION

(By Associated Press)

Paris, Jan. 27—It was understood this morning that the British delegation attending the session of the Supreme Allied Council considered it impossible to agree to the French viewpoint regarding German reparations. This morning steps of the council were cancelled in order that David Lloyd George the British prime minister might have an opportunity to talk privately with the members of the council regarding the French decision as stated yesterday by Paul Doumer, French minister of finance.

France is understood to stand firmly on the provisions of the Versailles Theaty to place the whole matter of the German indemnity in the hands of an allied reparations committee. Great Britain on the other hand adheres to the agreement reached last year at Bolougne by which it was stipulated that Germany shoud pay annually an average of six billion marks.

Recognition by the Allied Military Experts relative to the disarmament of Germany was to have been considered by the council today.

The route suggested runs from Hull to Gothenburg and there is also a suggestion of an extension across the Baltic, so as to provide direct communication between Hull and Petrograd.

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 28—The changes which have taken place in the demands of seamen as compared to the times when "salt horse" was the chief food in the forecastle, are shown by a new set of requests just formulated by the Federated Seamen's Union. They ask that their menu should include canned fruits, condensed milk, Worcestershire and tomato sauces, rolls and scones, bacon and eggs, boiled eggs, steak and onions, soup, Irish stew, roast beef, mutton, veal, assorted salads, cakes, plum pudding with sauce, custards, jellies. "Salt horse" was not on the list. Enamelled utensils, clean tablecloths three times a week are insisted upon.

IMMIGRANTS IN TEARS AT DOCKS TO REACH U. S.

STRINGENT RULINGS AND CLOSE EXAMINATIONS BREAK UP FAMILIES AND PRESENT PITIFUL SCENES

Bremen, Germany, Jan. 28—Hundreds of emigrants who come to Bremen, Hamburg and Danzig to seek new homes in America are rejected before they can embark for what to them is the land of plenty and promise. Tragic scenes are numerous when the ships physicians announce the list of those barred because of signs of disease or disability which would prevent their admission to the United States.

Reject One-Sixth

One hundred home-seekers were rejected out of 600 who attempted to leave Bremen on one steamer recently. All these unfortunates were not defective but the rejection of one member of a family in many cases prevented the entire group from sailing for America.

The most pitiful of the tragedies occur in the breaking up of family groups when some children old enough to travel alone are allowed to proceed to America, while others are detained. Weeping mothers among the hundred rejected the other day tried to kiss the hands of the physicians in an effort to get them to alter their diagnoses while scared groups of bundle-laden emigrants stood by in terror lest some technicality might also keep them off the steamer train for Bremerhaven.

Bar Polish Woman

One Polish woman, the widow of an army surgeon and her 16-year old son had been rejected at Danzig when the steamer had touched there because the boy had conjunctivitis. The woman came with her son by train to Bremen and pleaded for another examination here, but the physicians adhered to their original diagnosis and the woman was compelled to remain with her son. In several cases one child in a family of five or six showed traces of trachoma or conjunctivitis. This was sufficient to halt the whole family or to break up the family group, some of the members of which might go to America while others could not.

The refugees who flock into Danzig are generally in a wretched state when they arrive from the devastated parts of Poland and the Baltic states. Their accommodations there are old and unsanitary Political cross-currents and divided authority keeping shipping in Danzig in a constant state of uncertainty, with the result that emigrants can not get proper attention.

Travel Expense High

Steerage passage from German ports to America this winter have been exactly three times the rate charged before the war, or the equivalent of $110 while a second-class passage has cost $220.

In spite of the increased expense of trans-Atlantic travel, every steamer leaving for America has every berth taken and reservations are booked for months in advance. It is expected here that this situation may be relieved by the gradually increasing number of ships entering the German-American service and possibly, by immigration legislation now pending in the United States Congress.

WOULD RETIRE AGED STATE EMPLOYEES

Madison, Wis. Jan. 28—A retirement fund to provide for aged state employes is to be proposed by Senator George B. Sogano in a bill which he will introduce in the senate. The ultimate effort of the proposal would in effect, be to establish a state pension system.

Under provision of the bill, women employes who reach the age of 60 and men employes who are 65 years or age would be compelled to retire on a salary which, at the maximum, would amount to $725. University and normal school professors and appointive state officers would be exempt from application of the proposed statute.

Employes who have been in the service of the state for 15 years and who had become totally disabled would be privileged to retired in the maximum salary.

The retirement fund would be created from a two and one half cent levy on the salaries of state employes. A small appropriation of $30,000 annually would be appropriated by the legislature for the first two years.

It is estimated that after twelve years of operation the burden of the state would be increased.

BRITISH AND FRENCH CAN'T REACH DECISION

(By Associated Press)

Paris, Jan. 27—It was understood this morning that the British delegation attending the session of the Supreme Allied Council considered it impossible to agree to the French viewpoint regarding German reparations. This morning steps of the council were cancelled in order that David Lloyd George the British prime minister might have an opportunity to talk privately with the members of the council regarding the French decision as stated yesterday by Paul Doumer, French minister of finance.

France is understood to stand firmly on the provisions of the Versailles Theaty to place the whole matter of the German indemnity in the hands of an allied reparations committee. Great Britain on the other hand adheres to the agreement reached last year at Bolougne by which it was stipulated that Germany shoud pay annually an average of six billion marks.

Recognition by the Allied Military Experts relative to the disarmament of Germany was to have been considered by the council today.

UNIONS WOULD MAKE WORKERS BE AMERICANS

MAY FORCE INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE FOR UNEMPLOYED; PROPOSE FREE TEXT BOOKS FOR SCHOOLS

Madison Wis. Jan 28—Compulsory Americanization of Wisconsin industrial workers who can neither read nor right the English language will be proposed in a bill to be introduced in the state legislature, with the backing of the American Federation of Labor.

The A. F. of L. is also interested in a bill prepared to institute compulsory unemployment insurance for industrical workers. Proponents of the insuring of workers against unemployment, never before attempted in this country, say the measure now being prepared with the assistance of economic experts at the state university, will be one of the most far-reaching pieces of legislation ever presented to the legislature.

Have Many Proposals

The American Federation of Labor's legislative program, part of which has already been realized through the introduction of bills, includes in adition to the Americanization and insurance measures:

Free text books.

Straight eight hour day, with agricultural workers exempt.

Weekly pay law.

Old age pensions.

Rehabilitation of the industrial handicapped including the blind.

Increased mother's pensions.

Full time compulsory education for all children up to 16 years of age instead of 14 years, as at present.

Extension of vocational training for children in industry to 12 hours per week, instead of eight; making such training compulsory for children up to 18 years of age, instead of 17.

Increased salaries for school teachers.

Other bills proposed or already introduced would amend the boiler inspection law, one day rest in seven and workmen's compensation laws, extending their provision to classes not at present covered.

Discharge Iliterates

The Americanization bill now being drafted is designed with the double purpose of educating foreigners already in the state, and discouraging the further importation of illiterate persons to work in Wisconsin industries.

As it is being prepared the bill provides that all industrial workers who can not read and write shall attend schools for the same number of hours per week as provided for the vocational training of minors, such school attendance to be during the working hours, and on the employer's time. Under the present vocational law eight hours school attendance each week would be required, but another bill proposes to extend the period to twelve hours a week.

The A. F. of L. is also interested in marketing legislation but is waiting to see the bill to be presented by the marketing division before taking any action according to J. J. Handley secretary-treasurer of the state federaton. "If the marketing division's bill makes proper provision for the interests of the consumer we will support it," Mr. Handley said. "Otherwise we will have a bill presented to look out for the consumer's end."

Several of the measures proposed by the federation have been before the legislature in the past, but failed to carry. Included in this category are the free school text book law, increased mother's pensions, straight eight hour day, and weekly pay law. Senator Czerwinski has already introduced a basic eight hour law in the upper house but the labor leaders object to it on the ground that it merely fixes the standard limit of work.

CLAIM DE VALERA IS STAYING IN PARIS

(By Associated Press)

Paris, Jan. 28—Eamonn de Valera, Irish republic leader, whose arrival in Ireland was announced on December 30, has been reported to be somewhere in France by correspondents of a newspaper. There has been persistent reports of DeValera's presence in Paris but his exact whereabouts cannot be found.

In conference with a newspaper correspondent, deValera is quoted as saying, "I left America because it was at a time when England sought by an implausable policy of terrorism to frighten our people." When asked about Rev. O'Flannagan, de Valera stated that Rev. O'Flannagan did not represent the Irish people, but acted on his own initiative.

SCHOOL VACCINATION MAY BE REQUIREMENT

Madison, Wis., Jan. 28—State school rules requiring vaccination of children on order of a local board of health as a pre-requisite to school attendance will be enforced to the extent of the authority of the state board of health, according to a decision arrived at in the annual meeting of the board here recently.

The board ordered Health Commissioner F. J. Gosin of Green Bay to issue a new order extending the time in which vaccination may be performed in that city, where a small-pox epidemic is said to exist. The law requires that 25 days be granted the school children to comply with its provisions.

A teacher who refuses to evict unvaccinated children in the face of the health commissioner's order requiring evidence of vaccination will be subject to prosecution, the department held.

State Health Officer C. A. Harper has said that the proposed injunction to be brought by anti-vaccination forces in Green Bay will be contested by the state.

Stevens Point Folks Grateful

Her Catarrah Trouble Ends

Miss Clara Neuberger, 902 Division St., Stevens Point, Wis., said Friday:

"Before taking Kozak I suffered from Catarrh of the head. There seemed to be a constant ringing and unpleasant feeling in my head, while my nose always felt stuffed up and uncomfortable. I lost my appetite too. One bottle of Kozak not only done away with the Catarrh, cleared my head and nose and increased my appetite but caused me to feel considerably better in general. I can fully recommend Kozak."

Samuel Church, Local Druggist, Secures Exclusive Agency For Famous Kozak.

Yesterday's announcement that Kozak, the $10,000 Formula" would be introduced here, is the talk of Wisconsin Rapids.

Grateful for what Kozak accomplished in their cases, when all else had failed, multitudes of Wisconsin folks have testified to it's powers in overcoming stomach, kidney, liver and Catarrhal ills. In the East, where Kozak was discovered, it is easily the most talked-of remedy on the market. Kozak is composed of roots, barks and herbs, gathered from remote sections of the world and scientifically compunded by expert chemists.

Retired Farmer

"Never felt better in my life," exclaimed George Mulkins, 211 Cemetery St., Stevens Point, Wis., Monday. "If it hadn't been for Kozak I guess I would still be suffering from Catarrh of the stomach, loss of appetite and a run down system. That wasn't all either. Pains in the side, dizziness and spots flashing before my eyes were among the troubles Kozak relieved me of. Today, as a result of taking this Kozak I have a good appetite, my food digests well, I sleep much better and I have gained a pound in weight at least. Kozak has done wonders for me and I am thankful for it."

RICE THANKS KOZAK AS RHEUMATISM VANISHES

"Right for the very start, Kozak helped my rheumatism and kidney trouble," declared L. G. Rice, R. R. 5, Stevens Point, Wis., a well known retired merchant and farmer, last week. at McCulloch's drug store. "I was in bad shape. The pain and ache in my back were terrible. I had little appetite and couldn't get a good night's rest. Kidney disordeis added to my misery. Recently I got Kozak. Soon I acquired a fine appetite, my food digested right and my bachaches, rheumatic pains and kidney trubles were relieved. Now I'm able to sleep right through the night without being disturbed. I gladly recommend Kozak to anyone suffering from these ailments as I feel sure it will help them, too."

Remember, Kozak is sold exclusively at Sam Church's drug store, Grand Ave., here. Don't accept substitutes at other stores—there is only one Kozak. Sold in Amherst by Boynton & Son; Stevens Point, McCulloch.

Grip Vanishes

"For years I had suffered with a nasty hacking cough. It kept me awake at nights. Recently I caught a severe cold. I had to give up my work for 3 weeks. I took everything imaginable but it stuck to me. My cough grew worse, my eyes watered and my head felt full. I appealed to a friend who got me to try Kozak. To my astonishment not only did the cold leave but that cough went it. Kozak put me back to wrk, relieved the catarrh and makes it possible for me to sleep like a top now." So declared H. U. Oyan, 1340 35th St., Milwaukee, an artist.—Advertisement.

Stevens Point Folks Grateful

Her Catarrah Trouble Ends

Miss Clara Neuberger, 902 Division St., Stevens Point, Wis., said Friday:

"Before taking Kozak I suffered from Catarrh of the head. There seemed to be a constant ringing and unpleasant feeling in my head, while my nose always felt stuffed up and uncomfortable. I lost my appetite too. One bottle of Kozak not only done away with the Catarrh, cleared my head and nose and increased my appetite but caused me to feel considerably better in general. I can fully recommend Kozak."

Samuel Church, Local Druggist, Secures Exclusive Agency For Famous Kozak.

Yesterday's announcement that Kozak, the $10,000 Formula" would be introduced here, is the talk of Wisconsin Rapids.

Grateful for what Kozak accomplished in their cases, when all else had failed, multitudes of Wisconsin folks have testified to it's powers in overcoming stomach, kidney, liver and Catarrhal ills. In the East, where Kozak was discovered, it is easily the most talked-of remedy on the market. Kozak is composed of roots, barks and herbs, gathered from remote sections of the world and scientifically compounded by expert chemists.

Retired Farmer

"Never felt better in my life," exclaimed George Mulkins, 211 Cemetery St., Stevens Point, Wis., Monday. "If it hadn't been for Kozak I guess I would still be suffering from Catarrh of the stomach, loss of appetite and a run down system. That wasn't all either. Pains in the side, dizziness and spots flashing before my eyes were among the troubles Kozak relieved me of. Today, as a result of taking this Kozak I have a good appetite, my food digests well, I sleep much better and I have gained a pound in weight at least. Kozak has done wonders for me and I am thankful for it."

RICE THANKS KOZAK AS RHEUMATISM VANISHES

"Right for the very start, Kozak helped my rheumatism and kidney trouble," declared L. G. Rice, R. R. 5, Stevens Point, Wis., a well known retired merchant and farmer, last week, at McCulloch's drug store. "I was in bad shape. The pain and ache in my back were terrible. I had little appetite and couldn't get a good night's rest. Kidney disorders added to my misery. Recently I got Kozak. Soon I acquired a fine appetite, my food digested right and my bachaches, rheumatic pains and kidney trubles were relieved. Now I'm able to sleep right through the night without being disturbed. I gladly recommend Kozak to anyone suffering from these ailments as I feel sure it will help them, too."

Remember, Kozak is sold exclusively at Sam Church's drug store, Grand Ave., here. Don't accept substitutes at other stores—there is only one Kozak. Sold in Amherst by Boynton & Son; Stevens Point, McCulloch.

Grip Vanishes

"For years I had suffered with a nasty hacking cough. It kept me awake at nights. Recently I caught a severe cold. I had to give up my work for 3 weeks. I took everything imaginable but it stuck to me. My cough grew worse, my eyes watered and my head felt full. I appealed to a friend who got me to try Kozak. To my astonishment not only did the cold leave but that cough went it. Kozak put me back to wrk, relieved the catarrh and makes it possible for me to sleep like a top now." So declared H. U. Oyan, 1340 35th St., Milwaukee, an artist.—Advertisement.
